Theatrical Notes—Movements of Noted Actors and Actresses.

PARTICULARS OF THE TRIAL OF JAMES

Unfavorable Cotton Crop Reported—Agreement Between Railroad Companies—General News Items.

[illegible] were alternately up and down all day yesterday and last night. As usual the trouble was south of Yreka.

No Fever at Memphis.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 23.—A large number of telegrams were received to-day from different points asking whether the yellow fever had appeared in this city. It is supposed here that the rumor was circulated for speculative purposes, as no apprehension is felt regarding the fever. Memphis has never been healthier, and every preparation has been made to guard against the dissemination of the disease, even if it should find lodgment at points below here.

Unfavorable Cotton Crop Reports.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 27.—Dispatches to the Times-Democrat from all sections of the cotton belt show a considerable falling off of the crop prospects compared with last year, except in Tennessee and portions of Texas, caused by drought, caterpillars and rust. Decreases estimated in some cases at 33⅓ per cent. The reports from Texas also show a falling off. The outlook of the crop reported some damaged by drought.

Report Denied.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—It is denied on the authority of Wm. Grange, of the firm of Grange & Co., of [illegible], that the agreement, definitely fixing wages for the ensuing year, was made at the recent conference between the committees of manufacturers and the committees of the glass association. Most of the flint and window glass manufacturers are starting up their furnaces.

W. C. T. U.

[illegible], Aug. 27.—The convention of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, at [illegible], closed yesterday. The service was largely attended. Addresses were made by Miss E. W. [illegible], of Connecticut, Mrs. Mary Shearer, of [illegible] Park, Massachusetts, and President Mrs. Mary [illegible].

Crushed by an Elephant.

[illegible], Ohio, Aug. 27.—Harry Packard, of [illegible], Conn., an employee of Barnum's, was crushed this morning by one of the elephants and died at the hospital.

An Old German and his Wife Brutally Murdered by Unknown Assassins.

[illegible], Aug. 27.—Henry Hertle and wife, German shopkeepers, were found to-day murdered in their store. The customers went to the store in the morning and found it closed. Peeping through the blinds they saw Hertle on the floor lying in a pool of blood. The door was burst in, and the man found lying in the middle of the room with a hand[illegible] over his eyes and skull crushed in. The wife was found in a calico wrapper lying on the sofa in the parlor with her throat cut and one arm nearly severed. An immense crowd collected and the police notified. Hertle was supposed to have a large sum of money. Hertle and his wife were old and highly respected Germans. Most intense excitement prevails over the tragic event.

The Missing Girl.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—A telegram was received here to-night announcing that Colonel Churchill of St. Louis had received a letter from Jeremiah Ryan of No. 122 Paterson avenue of this city to the effect that Churchill's missing daughter was in that neighborhood. A visit to the number given disclosed the fact that Ryan was unknown. The house is occupied by a German named Smith, who is an upholsterer. He declared he never heard of Ryan. Old residents say they had never heard of the name. A thorough search in the locality failed to furnish any clue. The acting chief of police sent out from the central station to-night to the police stations a full description of the missing girl, with instructions that every effort be made to discover her whereabouts.

Missing Girl Found.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 27.—A brief dispatch from Keokuk is just received announcing the finding there this morning of Mary Churchill, who disappeared from her home a week ago last night. No particulars yet.

Shame, Remorse and a Double Suicide.

LEAVENWORTH, Kansas, Aug. 27.—Valley Falls, which was the scene of a suicide last week, has another to report. Young George Posey, who committed suicide, for a year or more, has had intimate relations with his brother's wife, and on being discovered felt the shame and remorse so much that he determined to take his life. The woman had fled to Colorado and wanted the boy to follow, but when the learned of his death returned with her husband. The had come after her, and on getting home this morning took poison and ended her life. The woman confessed having tried to poison her husband a short time ago.

Agreement Between Railroad Companies.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—The Union Pacific have entered into an agreement with the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company whereby they obtain important connections with San Francisco independent of the Central Pacific, and at the same time increase their freight mileage upon California freights 500 miles over their present mileage via Ogden. This advantage, however, will not probably be utilized until an existing difficulty should arise between the Union and Central Pacific Companies.

Restriction in Cattle and Pork.

[illegible], Aug. 27.—A. F. Saunders, of the special United States treasury commission, has just returned from Europe. He expresses his belief, in a published interview, that England will remove its restrictions on the importation of American cattle, but that Germany will not remove its restrictions on the importation of American pork until this government inaugurates a system of thorough inspection.

Charged with Malfeasance.

[illegible], Aug. 27.—The papers here will publish, in advance of its filing, a bill in chancery against Judah W. Begole, the governor of Michigan, charging him with malfeasance in the management of the estate of his deceased son, Frank C. Begole, His son died in Florida in 1873.

It is reported that the Emma Abbott opera company will go to California shortly.

FRANK JAMES' TRIAL.

Mrs. Samuels, his Mother, Appears in Court—Dick Liddell's Testimony.

GALLATIN, Mo., Aug. 27.—Frank James' trial was resumed this morning. Mrs. Samuels, mother of Frank James, was sworn for the defense, after which Dick Liddell was cross-examined. It has leaked out that the defense will endeavor to prove an alibi, General Joe Shelby being their principal witness, and further that the Winston gang consisted of five men, but that Jim Cummings was the fifth man.

Frank James, in cross-examination, says the arrangement to come to Missouri was perfected at Bob Hall's house in Tennessee. Frank James was not present. Defense lay great stress on this point. Witness then narrated his trip which terminated in the Winston robbery, his direct testimony being unshaken.

Liddell was asked if in company with Jesse James, Wood Hite and Jim Cummings, he did not meet Gen. Joe Shelby, in Lane county, near Shelby's house, just after the Winston robbery, and Shelby said to Jesse, "I thought you were dead." Jesse replied, "You see I am not." "Where is Frank?" asked the general. "His health is so bad that he has been south for several years," replied Jesse. And did not witness say he had not seen Frank James for more than two years? Witness answered that he had not seen General Shelby since the robbery until he met him in Kansas City, last Thursday. Witness further denied that he had told several other parties that Frank James was not in the Winston robbery. Witness related the negotiations with the governor to surrender, and showed a willingness to reveal the secrets of the gang.

ENGLAND.

PARTICULARS OF THE STEAMER COLLISION IN THE CHANNEL.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The steamer Woodburn foundered three minutes after the collision. It was a fine starlight night, and the sea was calm. The Woodburn being towed she was struck on the starboard quarter. There was time to lower her boats, and eleven of the persons on board were saved. Those drowned were sucked into the vortex caused by the sinking of the steamer, or became entangled in the wreckage. The St. Germain's bow was completely staved and was filled with water. The greater portion of the passengers were transferred to the tug boat. The St. Germain had 41 passengers on board, including fifty nuns on their way to Texas, and a crew of 122 persons. The captain of the St. Germain, finding the water pouring into her fore hold with frightful rapidity, ordered a sail to be rigged over the damaged portion of the vessel, in order to check the rush of water and reduce the pressure on the bulkhead. The officers of the St. Germain sighted the tugboat Recovery, which was towing the Woodburn, at 2:30 A. M., and thinking she was the only vessel the St. Germain's helm was ported in order that the steamer might go under the tugboat's stern. They had no idea there was a ship being towed. The St. Germain will go to the dry docks for repairs. From marks on her bow it is apparent that her figure head went right through the Woodburn, literally cutting that vessel in two. A panic ensued on the St. Germain after the collision and her passengers insisted on being transferred to the tug.

A TOURIST KILLED.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—A French nobleman was killed yesterday while ascending one of the highest mountains of the Engaddine group in Switzerland.

TO AID THE ISCHIA VICTIMS.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—A grand fete was given yesterday at the Tuileries gardens, under the auspices of the press of Paris. The proceeds are to aid the sufferers by the recent earthquake in Ischia. The receipts were 300,000 francs. There was an immense attendance.

THE EMPEROR OF ANNAM WANTS PROTECTION.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—A dispatch to Figaro from Saigon, says: Harmond, French civil commissioner, has gone to Hue, at the special request of the Emperor of Annam, who desires placing himself and the capital under French protection, having nearly lost his life on the first day of the bombardment by the French at the mouth of the river Hue. Harmond is provided with the most complete power to negotiate with the emperor.

RUSSIA.

RIOTS AGAINST RUSSIAN JEWS.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 17.—Advices from Ekaterinoslaw, the scene of the late riot against the Jews, say that forty-six houses were wrecked and plundered during the progress of the riots. The losses sustained by the Jews are estimated at 611,000 roubles. Fourteen Russians, who were wounded by troops in quelling the outbreak, have since died, making the total killed, twenty-eight. Numerous cases of Jewish assaults are reported, but the police and troops, acting with energy, in most instances promptly suppressed any attempts at outrages against the Jews. At Berdichs, however, eighty houses of Jews were fired. Their former inmates are without shelter, and are suffering great privation.

AUSTRIA.

ANTI-JEWISH RIOTS.

VIENNA, Aug. 27.—Violent riots against the Jews occurred at Egerszeg, Hungary, last Friday and Saturday night. Two thousand peasants took part in the outbreak, and wrecked all the houses and shops of the Jews in the place, and shouted "murder all the Jews." Troops were called out, but were unable to suppress the violence of the mob until reinforced.

PROLONGED RIOTING.

VIENNA, Aug. 27.—The riots at Egerszeg lasted three days. The peasants were armed with muskets, and stoutly resisted the troops. It is reported that twenty soldiers and many rioters were killed. Riots against Jews also occurred at Churgo Kez, [illegible] and Kanizsa.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HEAVY STORM.

HAVANA, Aug. 22.—The Commercial of Porto Rico says: The storm on this island on the 7th was the worst experienced in many years. Rain commenced at 8 in the morning and continued for five hours. The river rose and inundated part of the city, causing great damage to houses. Many persons had to escape by swimming. One life was lost. In another part of the island the ravages of the storm were severe. Arecibo sustained the most damage.

BRIGANTINE BURNED.

HALIFAX, Aug. 27.—The brigantine Ruthel, owned by James R. Cithjon, and E. P. Archibald, of Halifax, was burned in Little Glace Bay on Thursday night.

THE NORTHERN PACIFIC.

Comments of the New York Press upon its Completion.

THE GUESTS TO BE ROYALLY ENTERTAINED.

The Position of [illegible] clined—How the [illegible] General Passenger Agent Declines—Guests will Travel to the Scene of the Last Spike Ceremonies.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—[Special.]—The Tribune editorially says: "Early next month a gold spike will be driven to [illegible] the rail of the Northern Pacific railroad, which has [illegible] ready been practically finished; but the feeling with which the public will regard the event will contrast strongly with the memorial rejoicings when the Union and Central Pacific roads were formally united. There is nothing marvelous in this change of feeling. The first great victory over natural obstacles was hailed as a national triumph, but new Pacific roads stand on a different footing. When the Southern Pacific was completed to a junction with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe at Deming, the new line was regarded purely as a commercial enterprise, not as an achievement essential to national unity. So the third complete route, which the last rail was laid August 22, in the [illegible] north, close to the British boundary, is considered only in its commercial and industrial relations. Whether there is now, or is likely to be, business enough for three distinct transcontinental lines is not quite so clear as some persons would be glad to have it.

WE ARE BUILDING TOO MANY ROADS.

The general belief that we have been building too many railroads, and that these vast enterprises are some years in advance of public needs, prevents anything like enthusiasm at the completion of the work. Men of foresight, however, see that the nation is greatly strengthened by these new arteries of communication, one close to the southern and the other close to its northern boundary. In the event of any war it will no longer be dependent upon a single central route, possibly blocked by snow, for the transportation of troops and supplies. If assailed from the south, it can move its forces with rapidity to any threatened point. If one road bound the nation together, these not only bind it more closely and firmly, but give it vastly increased hold upon the business and interests of the population adjoining us on the north and south.

OUR NEIGHBORS SHARING THE BENEFIT.

Mexico is already feeling the influences of American enterprise. Its richest regions can now be reached more readily from Washington than from Mexico, and have no commercial outlets except through the United States. In a measure similar results have already followed in the dominion of Canada. Settlers along the entire line from the Lake of the Woods to Vancouver island have as yet, no better communication with the outer world than by United States railroads, and when branches are completed connecting the Canadian Pacific with the Northern Pacific system they will be drawn into even closer intercourse with the people of Dakota, Montana and Washington territory. Thus the new arteries of trade, whether financially beneficial to the projectors or not, will tend powerfully to bring the whole continent more under the influence of the republic. Their completion may well be recognized as an event of national interest and importance, which will be more fully appreciated ten years hence than it can now.

THE "HERALD'S" COMMENTS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—[Special.]—Only the Herald and the World, of the morning papers here, notice editorially the completion of the Northern Pacific. The Herald says that fourteen years ago the completion of the first Pacific railroad was the cause of a grand jubilification. On the laying of the last rail and the driving of the last spike the speeches and responses were promptly announced throughout the country by telegraph. When the work began 100 guns were fired in City Hall park, stock went up in Wall street, and a special prayer, composed by the bishop of this diocese, was offered in Trinity church. Yesterday the Northern Pacific announced its readiness to carry freight and passengers from the lakes to Portland, Or.; that it was having been completed the day before, but there was no national jubilee, nor were there any special prayers offered, unless privately, and for it to recovery of the stock of the road from the timbo in which it and several other securities indulged in.

WHAT THE "WORLD" SAYS.

The World says: Among the wonders worked by time, there are few stranger than this completion of a road which ten years ago led the way to the great national panic. Since the charter was granted a great discovery has been made in railroad building, namely, that railroads can be built without subsidies. The only apparent interest created on the street by the announcement of the road's completion is over the receipt of a dispatch, alleged to have come from Walla Walla yesterday, announcing that a train of thirty cars loaded with wheat would start forthwith for Minneapolis. Grain men at the produce exchange say that the fifteen carloads of wheat had already arrived at Minneapolis from Washington territory, and there was considerable excitement over it.

VILLARD'S EXCURSION TRAIN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 26.—[Special.]—Recognizing the importance of the opening of the Northern Pacific railroad, a circular letter has been issued by F. C. Odell, superintendent of transportation, which contains instructions to the division superintendents of the eastern portion of the Northern Pacific road, and gives them information in regard to the manner in which the excursion of President Villard is to be run on their respective divisions. To guard against accidents. The excursion train will be run as a special, in four sections of ten palace coaches each. Upon each section there will be telegraph operators with a relay battery and climbers, in order that telegraphic communication can at once be made from any point at which it may be deemed necessary. There will be an experienced car repairer with each section.

DECLINED THE HONOR—THE PREPARATIONS.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 26.—[Special.]—It was stated yesterday that the Northern Pacific railway had decided to divide its passenger and ticket departments, and that the position of general passenger agent had been offered to M. H. Dixon. It was generally believed that Mr. Dixon would unhesitatingly accept the position, but it appears from private dispatches received yesterday, that after consultation with the officers of the Milwaukee and St. Paul, he has decided to decline the honor. Mr. Barnes will continue to be general passenger and ticket agent, and he will be given a competent assistant, with the title of assistant general passenger agent.

Preparations have been made for the entertainment of the guests of the Northern Pacific railroad, who will be present at the formal opening September 8. It is said $25,000 have been expended for wines and liquors alone. People of the northwest talk of nothing but the proposed excursion. Invitations were limited to 500, and they were sent to the most prominent Americans and to people of Europe. On the 31st inst. trains bearing the party will arrive here. St. Paul business men have made liberal subscriptions for the entertainment of guests.

CANADA.

HANLAN'S MOVEMENTS.

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—Hanlan has gone to Toronto. No official arrangements are made in regard to his race with Laycock, but Hanlan says he will go to Australia and meet Laycock if reasonable expenses are paid.

THE BOSTON OPINION.

There is no occasion for alarm at the possible consequences of the opinion of Justices Lowell and Nelson at Boston in the case of the Chinese, Ah Heong landed there. Though the opinion virtually nullifies the Chinese restriction act, yet it is not conclusive since the questions involved may be taken up to the supreme court; and it may also be well to remember that congress will soon assemble, when a supplementary act will be passed, if deemed necessary. Discussing the Boston opinion and its consequences, the San Francisco Alta says: Hong Kong, the British dependency whose Chinese residents have been declared entitled to admission to the United States, contains at least 125,000 Chinamen, and could of itself, therefore, make a considerable increase in the Mongolian population of the United States. But Chinamen residing in all other countries and not subjects to the emperor are equally free to seek our shores. There are nearly a million Chinese in the Philippine islands, besides many in Japan, Cochin China, the Strait Settlements and other parts of the world, from which plentiful additions to the coolies already here could and would be drawn by the companies if no barrier were interposed by legislation. But even this is once concede the right to import Chinese from Hongkong, and it would prove impossible to tell the British subject from the imperial one. Before the act was passed a lot of our Chinese came from Hongkong, being brought there from various parts of China preparatory to immigration to the United States. It is, therefore, clear as noonday that the restriction act must be amended, if it is really to restrict. Whether to do this there will be necessary the prior negotiation of a treaty with Great Britain depends upon whether in the various existing treaties with that government there is any provision guaranteeing to all the subjects of the queen the right of free ingress and egress. If the only provision is a guarantee to British subjects in this country of all the rights and privileges enjoyed by the most favored nation, a simple prohibition of immigration of Chinamen irrespective of allegiance would, perhaps be legally sufficient, since it would apply to all nations alike, and grant none of the favors which it denies to hers.

A Sagacious Animal.

A dark bay mare belonging to [illegible] Jonas S. [illegible] venue, the Greenstreet [illegible], whose stable is on Cooper [illegible] street, near [illegible], accomplished a wonder on [illegible] the other morning. She had been driven to the stable [illegible] the buggy and left alone [illegible]. The colored hostler ascended [illegible] the hay [illegible] prise may be imagined, [illegible] having [illegible] drawn toward that quarter [illegible] a peculiar noise to see the head and shoulders of the sagacious animal appearing up the stairway which she effected [illegible] safety, and which is quite a [illegible] ty-two steps. The hostler [illegible] in putting down the hay [illegible] she had become tired [illegible] he had little doubt [illegible] again without danger, but [illegible] and quite a job he had [illegible] Instead she was allowed to [illegible] now. At noon carpenters [illegible] from the haymow door to [illegible] street, upon which the animal [illegible] ed with perfect safety.

UNDERVALUATION OF PROPERTY.

SILVERTON, Aug. 26.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Your criticisms upon the mortgage tax law, in that it caused double taxation, and even more, are undoubtedly correct.

No wonder that persons having money loaned on mortgage security squirm; they have a right to squirm or evince their displeasure by writing open letters to county assessors, bantering them to assess mortgages as other property is rated on the tax lists. The proposition of the Scotch Loan Company's agent, Hugh Roger, is perfectly fair and equally logical or illegal with the assessor's other performances.

In Marion county this year the county assessor has raised the valuation above any previous year, but while doing it he has everywhere declared his rule to be half valuation for real estate. He first values it at its cash value as provided and defined by law, and then takes half of the sum for the basis of taxation. It is needless to say that his proceeding is a direct and willful violation of law. But he is more candid than the assessor of Polk, and does not undertake any subterfuge by saying that "people differ in opinion as to the value of land, but mortgages are fixed." On the other hand he expresses his regret that he cannot do as the law commands him, and thereby experience the pleasure of fulfilling his legal obligation and his oath. Poor men! they are to be pitied. There is not one of all the county assessors but perceives and keenly feels the injustice of requiring one fellow citizen to pay twice as much tax as another fellow citizen, and that too, when the law solemnly declares that the tax shall be equal and uniform.

What a paradox this is! No person wishes to pay more than his just proportion of tax; every one objects to unjust taxation. The assessors desire to do justice; the law says they shall do justice in all cases, and further, compels them to swear to do so, and yet the most shameful injustice is perpetrated openly, undeniably, by these same officers. There is no enigma here, every one understands it.

The assessors are obeying the power behind the throne, violating their oaths, defying the law and doing rank injustice, in order not to offend against the interest and opinions of the great body of the people. Pshaw! pshaw!! One courageous assessor could dissipate this muddle. Let him fearlessly do his duty, put all property at its legally defined cash value and every county assessor would be compelled to do the same.

Then our fellow citizens who hold mortgage securities would have no just cause of complaint, or at least one great cause would be removed.

"But," says one, "we would have a large surplus revenue in the state treasury to be squandered or stolen;" and this last objection is the real originating cause which has prevented just assessments up to this date. THE OREGONIAN has more than once hinted at the popular distrust of office holders and office seekers. It is well founded. People have learned by experience. There is a constitutional provision forbidding a state debt of more than $50,000, but that did not prevent a public debt of nearly a million. If men elected to office, and acting under oath to obey the constitution, will saddle the people with a heavy unconstitutional debt, what would they not do with cash in hand?

Our experience has shown, how a surplus in the vaults of the state treasury may be used to forward the schemes of an ambitious and unscrupulous politician who aspires to a seat in the United States senate. The best place in the world for surplus revenue is in the people's pockets, as the people well understand; but the means at present used, that of partial and unjust assessments, is not the proper one to keep it there.

The proper method is to empower the secretary of state to declare the rate of taxes in such amount as to meet the legitimate needs of the state, in the same manner that the rate for county purposes is now ascertained by the county courts.

Such a bill was introduced in the lower house of the last legislative assembly by Mr. Jones, a member from Marion county, but it failed to become a law.

That method, with proper assessments will do away with the present hocus-pocus, relieve assessors from the pressure that prevents them from doing their duty, and consequently remove the causes of dissatisfaction and distrust in the minds of large classes of our people.

The injustice being done by the present assessments, to the money lenders on real estate security, cannot be avoided this year. I do not believe that the people now desire a repeal of the mortgage tax law; neither do I believe that the great body of the people exult in the injustice which compels the "Shylocks" to pay double tax. I know that they regret it, but there is no seeming injustice in compelling, as far as practicable, a man who has money to pay tax in just proportion upon that money. Whether it is wise and good policy to do so and thereby tax credits is an entirely different question. I presume that people generally will be satisfied with the solution that experience will give to it.

Owners of Some of the Most Valuable—California Represented in the List.

Chicago Times.

Two pear-shaped ear-rings of the Empress Josephine, when weighed together, turned the scales at ninety-one carats, and were valued at 500,000 francs. A pearl necklace worn by the princess royal of England on the occasion of her marriage with the crown prince of Prussia, and the gift of her brother, the prince of Wales, was valued at 50,000 francs. One of the magnificent pearls in the English crown was presented to Queen Catherine, spouse of Charles II. The mines of Golconda employed sixty thousand persons. It is reported that the Sultan Mahmoud, after thirty-two years' reign, left four hundred pounds weight of diamonds. Diamonds, coming as they do from South Africa and Brazil, were used by the negroes at first as counters when playing cards. Mme. Ombre, the prima donna, had the finest diamonds ever seen in this country, and once they formed part of the crown jewels of Holland. The necklace was made of pliable gold, studded with large stones. From it hung pendants of full blown roses, rosebuds and leaves in clusters. The flowers were made with diamonds, and the leaves were composed entirely of emeralds. From these depended in turn a fine floral fringe of handsome diamonds. The present of jewels the Khedive of Egypt sent General Sherman's daughter as a marriage gift was valued at $250,000. Mrs. Leland Stanford of California wears a diamond necklace made in the form of merit that cost $80,000. The elegant ruby worn by Lola Montez a wee in her dark tresses is now counted at a [illegible]. Mrs. J. G. Haggin owns $80,000 worth of diamonds, and Annie Louise Cary possessed the largest and most perfect emerald in the world. It was formerly the property of Queen Isabella, and is valued at $50,000. Laura D. Fair owns $60,000 worth of diamonds, and Mrs. Bonanza Mackay has the largest sapphire in the world. It was bought from a Polish nobleman for 800,000 francs. Rothschild has a marvelous collection of jewels, a set of turquois in which there are 500 stones, and a set of carbuncles given her at Vienna by a Turkish nobleman. When playing Lady Dedlock the jewels she wears are valued at $75,000. Bryce Wright of Regent street, London, owns a diamond of note, set in a ring, which for years was kept in the treasury of the mogul emperors of Hindostan. It is one of those rare diamonds known to be engraved, and from the work upon it, and the hardness of the stone, must have cost years of incessant labor. The engraving is supposed to be the work of a Persian artist. It is a monogram of two Arabic words interlocked together, making the favorite, "Oh Ali." The work thus have been done about 1,200 A. D. Madame Elise, the Parisian bareback rider, supposed to be the daughter of the emperor of Austria, has her costume studded with diamonds instead of spangles, and a crown of elegant diamonds is worn nightly on her hat. The Duke of Orleans has a diamond valued at $150,000. The Great Mogul owns a rose-colored one worth £135,000, while the two belonging to Persia, known as "Mountain of Splendor" and "Sea of Glory," are worth £145,000 and £35,000. Empress Catherine II of Russia, under the eagle on the top of her diadem, wore a diamond worth nearly £5,000,000. It was obtained from the idol of Malabar, being one of its eyes. A French grenadier, having deserted from the Indian service, contrived to become a priest of the idol. He stole the eye, fled to Madras, and sold it to a sea captain for 20,000 rupees. A Jew purchased it from the captain for £18,000, and after exchanging hands several times it was bought for the empress of Russia for 127,314 guineas. "The Pilgrim" is the finest pearl in the Spanish treasury. It belonged to a merchant who paid 100,000 crowns for it. He offered it for sale to King Philip IV. His majesty tauntingly asked him how he could pay so much for a pearl, and did he not consider it a venture? "No sire," replied the merchant, "I knew there was a king of Spain." This compliment proved too much, and immediately he paid the merchant his price for the gem.

Superstitious ideas attach to certain gems. The emerald is worn as a talisman and is a promise of happiness. The aquamarine suggests sadness, the sapphire purity and love, the ruby pride and valor. The origin of the opal is clad in a beautiful romance. A parting one once seen a rainbow ran to clasp it in her arms and perpetuate its beauty. It vanished when she pursued, when she wept bitterly, complaining that with her case, no jewel could compare with this one of the sky. A spirit appearing and, crystalized, the parts four flashed with the rainbow's rays. The girl's joy was great to find [illegible] her bosom this gem with heart of prisoned [illegible].

Sherman's Heart Melted.

Boston Traveler's Washington Letter.

A [illegible] treasury official pointed out a pretty young [illegible] the other day and remarked: "Now that [illegible] obtained an office without political influence, [illegible] is rather interesting, and I will tell it to [illegible] show what pluck and perseverance will do. [illegible] young lady came here one day and asked to be [illegible] to Secretary Sherman's room. She saw [illegible] and told him that she was a soldier's orphan with a widowed mother dependent upon her for support, and asked for employment. Sherman, in his cool and almost frigid [illegible] told her that he did not see as he [illegible] anything for her. The young lady looked [illegible] the face and replied that she must [illegible] something. 'Why, Mr. Secretary,' said she, '[illegible] do anything to earn enough money to support my mother and myself. I am willing to come [illegible] and black your boots every morning, if [illegible] only give me money enough to get something to eat and a place to sleep.' Sherman looked [illegible] the window for a moment and said: 'Well, [illegible] come in to-morrow afternoon and see me.' [illegible] day she called, and Sherman, without a [illegible], handed her note to the appointment clerk, and [illegible] secured a first rate position, which she has [illegible] ever since."

Arrest of the Murderer of Hillard Stout—Meeting of California's Grape Growers—Runaway at a Funeral.

CALIFORNIA.

The Murder of Nicholas Skerrett.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 23.—The reports circulated yesterday to the effect that Chief Crowley and Captain Lees had discovered the room occupied by Le Roy previous to the murder of Nicholas Skerrett are believed to be true, but the heads of the police department refuse to divulge either the location of the room, what they found in it, or that they have found it at all. In fact, they refuse to be questioned about the case and bid the reporters wait until the inquest takes place, at which, it is estimated, new facts will come out. It is said that the police have accumulated a mass of evidence against Le Roy, which they will keep secret until the day Le Roy goes before the superior court to answer for the death of the pioneer. "Much has been published," said a detective to a reporter yesterday, "and much has been kept quiet in the interest of public justice."

Viticultural Convention.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—The second annual convention of the State Viticultural Association met here this afternoon, and will continue one week. The convention will be critical in its character, and will be devoted to exchanging information on grape culture. Between twenty and thirty vineyard growers are present. Wines will be placed on exhibition to-morrow. A case of Hungarian wine has been sent for to compare with the California productions.

Ran Away with a Hearse.

Yesterday afternoon a pair of horses attached to a hearse ran away and demolished the hearse, instantly killed one horse, and inflicted injuries on John W. Reid, the driver, from which he died in a few hours. The fatal collision occurred in front of the Chronicle office. The horses ran into a post supporting an electric light.

Death of Sacramento's First Mayor.

General Albert M. Winn, first mayor of Sacramento, died at his residence in Sonoma county yesterday morning, aged 73 years. He was the founder of the "Sons of Revolutionary Sires" and "Native Sons of the Golden West." Funeral to-morrow at Sacramento.

Pleasant Excursion Anticipated.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—Every preparation has been made to render pleasant the excursion of 600 Knights Templar to Monterey to-day. Lunch will be served at the Hotel Del Monte.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Particulars of the Burning of the Carlton House.

OLYMPIA, Aug. 27.—[Special.]—The fire of last evening by which the Carlton house was completely destroyed, would have swept the entire block, if not half the town, but for the efforts put forth by the Columbia Engine Company and the help extended by the loggers and of those citizens who were interested in the welfare of the city, especially the ladies, who were foremost in carrying water to the burning building. Almost immediately after the first alarm, it was found impossible to reach the upper story, the flames having gained complete control, when upon all efforts were directed to saving the furniture on the lower story, with such success that most of it was saved.

The undertaking establishment of Harned & Robinson had a close call, having caught fire twice and had it not been for the salt water carried from the bay, it would undoubtedly have followed the Carlton, and thus all the lower part of the town was saved.

A few persons were hurt during the fire, but none seriously. The loss, exclusive of insurance, was about $11,000. There is now an excellent chance for the establishment of a large hotel in this city, and, without doubt, such a place would receive extensive patronage, especially from the commercial classes. The Carlton was owned by Mrs. M. L. Clark of this city, who is now with her daughter visiting in Portland, Oregon.

The Murderer of Stout Arrested.

THE DALLES, Aug. 27.—[Special.]—Sheriff Storrs received a telegram from Sprague, Washington Territory, stating that Clanton, the murderer of Stout, has been arrested. A man went up to-day to identify him.

THE STRIKE FROM MR. GOULD'S STANDPOINT.

The Modern Age for September.

That astute and far-seeing gentleman named Jay Gould has probably been deprived of very little sleep by the strike of the telegraph operators. If the dear public be subjected to inconvenience by being thrown back fifty years in its methods of intercommunication, Mr. Gould is doubtless sorry, but then how could he help it if the operators would insist on not working, because they wrongly imagined that they were underpaid and over-worked? No amount of argument on his part would convince these wrong-headed fellows that their grievances were purely imaginary. Besides, Mr. Gould is not an orator and he really hasn't the time to take each one off separately and tell him how much mistaken mere employes are apt to be when dealing with the vexed questions of capital and labor. We can picture the dear man sighing over the perversity of the operators and adjusting himself to a more comfortable position in his steamer chair, prepared to take a more general view of the situation. The dear public would doubtless become dissatisfied with the idea of their electric communication being hampered and at times cut off whenever a dispute arose between the companies and the operators. To some newspaper fellow or other would occur the bright idea that the only way to prevent such occurrences in the future would be for the government to take the telegraph lines into its own hands. The Western Union Company would gladly do all it could to facilitate business over its lines, but of course it could not be expected to yield to the outrageous demands of the strikers. And poor Mr. Gould sighed again as he thought of the poor public growing more and more impatient as the strike continued, and the necessity for the government owning the telegraph became more and more apparent to the people. Against the time that congress convened there might arise a public howl in favor of taking Mr. Gould's telegraph lines away from him. We are afraid Mr. Gould didn't start up with horror when this thought occurred to him. He doubtless sighed again more deeply than before, and let his mind dwell on all the nice, fresh water there was in that eighty millions of Western Union stock. It wasn't a pleasant prospect to give up all that water for the bulky surplus of gold eagles and standard dollars with which the United States Treasury is said to be overflowing, but Mr. Gould doubtless knows how to manufacture some more water. And then, perhaps, Mr. Gould's gold clear mind turned toward a calculation of how many congressmen, at how much apiece, he would have to buy to keep the government from going ahead and building its own lines instead of buying the Western Union's plant. Congressmen might come high, but he must have them. Ten per cent. on eighty millions would buy quite a number of congressmen. With 50 per cent. of water in the eighty millions and 10 per cent. (outside figures) for congressmen at market rates, poor Mr. Gould would have only thirty-two millions of water to exchange for gold and silver dollars. Once more the little man sighed and glanced along the deck of his yacht as he thought what a mercenary world this is, and how much from his striking operators and an unfeeling public combined to place on the shoulders of a scuffling millionaire.

A CONSPIRACY.

Strange Case of Drowning to Defraud Insurance Societies.

A strange story of pretended drowning for the purpose of defrauding two insurance companies is told in the Los Angeles Herald of the 13th ult. On August 31, 1882, about 9 o'clock in the evening, Robert Proby went in bathing at Santa Monica beach, in company with a man named Baden, leaving his clothes on the beach in charge of a man named Zeron. An hour later Baden and Zeron aroused some people at Santa Monica canyon, asking for assistance to search for the body of Proby, whom they declared had drowned while attempting to swim out in the surf. No body was found then or subsequently, but the men made affidavit in Los Angeles of the details of the drowning, of the cries for help, etc., and an effort was made by Proby's supposed wife living in East Los Angeles, to collect $5,150 insurance from the Legion of Honor, and $2,000 from the Knights of Honor, for which sums Proby's life was insured in those orders. The circumstances attending the pretended drowning and the actions of the two alleged witnesses excited the suspicion of the orders, and they and some officers of the Odd Fellows, to which order Proby also belonged, began investigating the case, paying no insurance, although the supposed widow was assisted in some measure. Proby, after roaming over the coast for months, wrote to friends in Texas, by which means his existence and whereabouts were discovered. The information finally led to his arrest on Tuesday last at La Puente station, twenty miles from Los Angeles, where he was working as a carpenter under the name of Osborn. It is now known that the woman in Los Angeles who undertook to collect the insurance is not his wife, [illegible] living [illegible] in Texas. The details of the plan worked at Santa Monica are not known, but it is believed that Proby did in fact go in bathing, crying for help, and then land in the dark some distance down the beach. His confederates, Zeron and Baden, have escaped from the state, but will be pursued. It is believed that the pretended wife was also a confederate in the crime.

On Monday a fire in West Fifth street, New York, destroyed $75,000 worth of property. The principal loss is the cool-pulling factory of Hiram Hollins of Boston.

GEOLOGY AND EVOLUTION.

Extracts From An Address Delivered Before the Second Annual Meeting of the American Science Association.

On the 15th August, the American Science Association began its thirty-second annual meeting at Minneapolis. The retiring president, Prof. J. W. Dawson, principal of McGill University, Montreal, delivered an address upon "Some Unsolved Problems of Geology," from which the subjoined extracts are made. Of Professor Dawson it is said that, among contemporary geologists, he has no superior. He stands easily in the front rank of the scientists of our day, not only in his [illegible] researches but in the spirit in which he uses them. He is cautious against hasty generalizations, as illustrated by this paragraph:

Geology as a science dates from the present century ag[illegible]. We have reason for surprise under the circumstances that it has learned so much, and we should surprise that so many persons appear to think its work complete, its growth ended, and that it can speak with confidence of all the great questions of the earth that have been hidden from us so long before us. Such being the infancy of the science of the earth, it is not too much to say that humility, hard work in collecting and abstinence from hasty generalizations should characterize geology, at least for several years to come. Science is light, and light must be carried high, else it will fail to show the world. Let us strive to raise it higher, and to shine over every obstruction which obscures it on the true interests of humanity, and not hold up this light and not stand in its way.

Proceeding to examine the theory of evolution, Principal Dawson remarked:

It has been urged on the side of evolution that this hypothesis does not profess to give an explanation of the absolute origin of the planet, or even of the original organism, single cell or mass of simple mass of protoplasm or death. All experimental attempts at synthesis of the complex albuminous compounds to obtain the living from the non-living have been fruitless, and indeed we cannot conceive of the process by which such changes could occur. That they have been effected we know, [illegible] employed by the maker is still to us as it probably was to him who wrote, "And God said let the waters swarm." How vast is the gap in our knowledge of our practical power implied in this admission, which must however be made by our [illegible] absolutely [illegible] by a superstitious [illegible] forms of words which too often pass current as philosophy.

But if we are content to start with a number of organisms already made—a somewhat large [illegible] start however—we shall have to ask:

HOW DO THESE VARY SO MUCH AS TO GIVE RISE TO SPECIES?

It is a singular illusion in this matter [illegible] who profess to be disciples of nature, law [illegible] the [illegible] may be boundless, aimless, and [illegible] and that by spontaneous selection from [illegible] the productive development arises. But [illegible] supposition of mere chance and [illegible] way of science. Variation must have [illegible], causes and the effects must be regulated by some law or laws. Now, it is easy to see that it cannot be caused by a mere innate tendency of the organism itself. Every organism is so equilibrated, that it has no such spontaneous tendency, except within the limits set by its own law of its periodical changes. Then, however, an equilibrium more or less stable [illegible] all attempts hitherto made have failed to [illegible] for the fixity of certain, say, of very [illegible] forms throughout geological time, but the consideration that one may be in a more stable state of equilibrium than another, so far, [illegible] it. A rocking stone has no more tendency to move than an ordinary boulder, but it may be made to move with a touch, probably a [illegible]. But if so the causes of variation are external, as in many cases acting [illegible] upon them to be, and they must depend on the ability of change in surroundings, and be arranged as not to be too extreme in amount, [illegible] a determinate direction. [illegible] how remarkable the unity of the adjustment involved in such a supposition! how surprising must be to our minds and always more or less successful attempt to produce and carry forward the distinct races in definite directions! To this [illegible] be chance. If it exists it must depend on deeply laid laws in the nature of things, else it would more than ever be magic and causeless miracle; more certain of this conclusion when we consider the vast and orderly succession made known to us by geology, and which must have been regulated by fixed laws of which only a few of which are as yet known to us.

Beyond these general considerations, we have others of a more special character, based on the geological facts which show how imperfect are the attempts as yet to reach the true causes of the introduction of genera and species.

One of the remarkable facts of the fixity of types of living beings in geological time. If, [illegible] Marchal, [illegible] ancient polygenic [illegible], the trouble with Barrande and Gaudry, so [illegible] forms of life through [illegible] period of the [illegible], which extends along [illegible] line, we shall be greatly struck with this, and especially with the continuity of the existence of many low types of life throughout [illegible] of physical conditions of the most stupendous character, and over a lapse of time scarcely to be estimated. What is still more remarkable is that these also [illegible] groups which, within certain limits, are perhaps the most variable of all. In the present earth, no creatures are [illegible] and individually more variable than the protozoans [illegible] example, the foraminifera [illegible] for the [illegible], and yet, for these groups are found [illegible] from the beginning of the Paleozoic, and modern species seem scarcely to differ from specimens procured from the [illegible] half way back to the beginning of our record. If we suppose that the present and foraminifera are the descendants of the Silurian period we can affirm that in all the lapse of time they have, on the whole, in [illegible] greater changes than that which may be [illegible] various forms at present. The same is [illegible] applicable in other low animal forms. In [illegible] which are higher and less variable that is equally [illegible] worthy. The pattern of the veins fan of the [illegible] of cockroaches, and the structure and form of land snails, gally-worms and decapod crustaceans, were all settled in the carboniferous age in a way that still remains. So were the foliage and the fructification of club mosses and ferns. If, [illegible] members of these groups branched off, so as to lay the foundation of new species, this must have been a very rare and exceptional occurrence, and one demanding even some suspension of the ordinary laws of nature.

Certain recent utterances of eminent scientific men in England and France, are most instructive with reference to the difficulties which encompass this subject. Huxley, at present the leader of English evolutionists, in his "Rede lecture" delivered at Cambridge, Eng., holds that there are only two possible alternative hypotheses as to the origin of species—(1) that of "construction" or the mechanical putting together of the materials and parts of each new species separately; and (2) that of "evolution," or that one form of life "proceeded from another" by the "establishment of small differences." After comparing these modes [illegible] to the disadvantage of the first, he concludes with the statement that "this was his case for evolution," which he rested wholly on arguments of this kind he had adduced—three arguments, being the three base false analogy of ordinary reproduction and the transformation of species, and the [illegible] succession of forms more or less similar in geological time, yet there [illegible] having any bearing, whatever on the origin of any species or on the cause of the observed succession. With reference to the view of other writers, we [illegible] that no certain evidence has yet been obtained either by experiment or by observation bound induction as to the mode of origin of any species, enough is known to show that numerous types of life have had, grouped, many under the [illegible] of a definite or at once, [illegible] creation, critical evolution and gradual evolution. It is true that almost the only thing we certainly know is that the matter is that the differences characteristic of classes, orders, genera and species must have arisen not one or two, but in many ways.

There is not an unsolved problem in the study of life, or the zoological which it is still inadequate to solve. The latest [illegible] of paleontology to fill up the gaps in the chain of being. In this respect we are constantly [illegible] with the imperfection of the record, but facts show that this is much more complete than is generally supposed. Over long periods of life and many lines of being we have a nearly continuous chain, and if this does not show the connections desired, he fault is likely to be in the theory, or in the record. On the other hand, the abrupt and simultaneous appearances of new types in many species and genera forms and over wide and separate areas at one and the same time is too often supposed to be accidental. Hence paleontologists in endeavoring to establish evolution, have been obliged to resort to periods of exceptional activity in the introduction of species alternating with others of stagnation, a doctrine differing very little from that of special creations as held by the old geologists.

The attempt has lately been made to

ACCOUNT FOR THESE EPOCHS

By [illegible] assumption that the geological record relates only to periods of submergence, and gives no information as to those of elevation. This is assumed largely [illegible] as far as marine life is concerned; the periods of submergence are those in which new forms abound, for very obvious reasons already hinted, but the periods of new areas of land and fresh water life [illegible] those of elevation, and these have their records and monuments, often very rich and ample, as, for example, the swamp, the direct boundaries, the transition from the cretaceous [illegible] to the Laramie elevation, the tertiary lake basins of the west, the terraces and raised beaches of the pleistocene. Had I time to refer [illegible] the [illegible] in the continuity of life which cannot be explained by the [illegible] effect of the record. I can [illegible] at least that the life in this case [illegible] advanced per saltum—by leaps, rather than by a slow continuous process. Many able reasoners, as [illegible] Conklin in this country and Mivart and Collier [illegible] in England, hold this view.

Here, as elsewhere, a vast amount of careful study will be required to enable us to solve the problems of the history of life. But if so, the more the hope for the patient student and investigator. There is nothing more old [illegible] to research or unfavorable to science than the promulgation of a dogmatic decision that there is nothing to be learned but a monotonous and unbroken succession, amenable to known law and only to be covered, in other words, by the [illegible] and uncertain proportions by laws of bold and gratuitous hypothesis.

Sirs,—Your pills came all right and I can say they are a good bilious pill. I have used a great many pills, but I can say Dr. C. McLane's Pills, manufactured by Fleming Brothers, are genuine. And, gentlemen, you have my thanks in sending. I have some of those pills to my neighbors for a trial. One of my neighbors got three pills. He said they did help him. He felt the next day like a new man. He wishes me to send for fifty cents' worth for him. So, gentlemen, I will do all I can to introduce Dr. C. McLane's Liver Pills, manufactured by Fleming Brothers. You will find enclosed one dollar for more of your good pills. I also you could send me a sample of your Vermifuge by mail. I think it will take well here. Yours, with respect,

WM. H. DUGAN.

Please send soon.

LAW AND LAWYERS.

A lawyer at Olympia, who has written several excellent letters to THE OREGONIAN on the frequent failures of justice that disgrace our courts and juries and outrage the sense of the people, lays upon dishonest lawyers much of the blame. No doubt he is right in this. The recent "travesty of justice" reported in our state, furnishes a text for his last letter, in which he says: "So long as there are dishonest lawyers there will be dishonest juries. These, dispensing the law, must lead the way to a prompt, impartial and just administration of the law. To do this they must begin at home; they must clean out their ranks and demand a higher standard for the profession." Again, "We must go to the bottom and eradicate the [illegible] sentiment, the corrupt practices and the [illegible] motives that seek to justify [illegible]." These are good words; but can a [illegible] practice law,—in particular, can he allow his practice to include the defense of criminals, without going counter every day to the precepts they contain?

The lawyer knows that it is at least as often his business to circumvent the law and to defeat justice as it is to secure "a prompt impartial and just administration of the law." As the world goes he is considered the greatest lawyer who can devise most expedients to defeat justice. Few indeed are the lawyers who do not find the demands of business requiring them to take cases in which it becomes their duty to justify falsity, excuse crime, and [illegible] vice to the garb of virtue. Few indeed are the lawyers who do not take pay, who do not eagerly solicit, fees to defend persons whom they know to be guilty of crimes of the [illegible]. Do these lawyers desire "a prompt, impartial and just administration of the law"? It is just what they do not desire; this just what they labor and are expected to labor to prevent. Necessarily, then, the legal profession is to a great extent in league with efforts to foil the law and defeat justice. How are you going to introduce a higher tone into a profession the conditions of whose business require this steady assault upon the principles of right? Our correspondent has complained that his profession contains corrupt and unprincipled men. Is it a wonder? He says, and justly says, that they ought to be expelled from it. But is their expulsion practicable? Can any one be surprised that a profession contains corrupt and unscrupulous men when the practice of that profession so often demands apology for crime, defense of injustice, the confounding of right with wrong, and the total subversion of moral ends? The lawyer who does not become perverted and hardened, who does not lose the nice distinctions between right and wrong, virtue and vice, morality and immorality, by the pursuit of a profession which requires him to appear as [illegible] in advocacy of evil as of good, must have an excellent moral foundation. They who seek this profession naturally come to regard it as the sole object of the profession to thwart justice, to confound the law, and to secure impunity to scoundrelism. Bad lawyers, therefore, are the natural fruit of a bad system. That there should be so such circumspect, conscientious and upright lawyers is perhaps a better and stronger argument against "total depravity" than any presented by Mr. Beecher in his famous lecture against the doctrine of Adam's fall. "Woe unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken away the key of knowledge." The words have come down through eighteen hundred years. Are they not the fruit of a profound moral insight? If the key of knowledge is not taken away by a practice which darkens counsel, subverts right, excuses wrong, confounds all the distinctions between justice and injustice, and makes the worse appear the better reason, then the text has no meaning.

But it will be asked, What remedy do you propose for the abuses that surround the practice of the law? There is no remedy, save in the moral growth of the people. When that moral growth has reached a stage where it will hold the man infamous who advocates for [illegible] a notoriously immoral and corrupt scheme, who defends for hire crimes that justly admit no defense, and who will take advantage of every loophole in the law to undermine the law and defeat the ends of justice, we shall have fewer lawyers of the kind of which our writer complains. As it is, the lawyer who does these things, and does them most successfully, is regarded as the "smartest" man. It is only just therefore to say that the morals of the legal profession are up to the average standard of public morality. Many lawyers refuse to have anything to do with certain classes of cases, and some decline to engage in criminal practice at all.

Suppose a newspaper were known to hire out its services on any side of any question to whomsoever would pay for them; what would be thought of that newspaper? Suppose it were to undertake the defense of schemes of robbery for pay, or should take a "retainer" from a robber or murderer to aid him to escape the penalty of his crime. It would be no more infamous for a newspaper to do these things than for a lawyer to do them; yet the newspaper would fall under general condemnation. It would be regarded as a mercenary thing without principle or sense of shame, and would meet the obloquy and death it deserved. It depends greatly on public opinion whether the lawyer shall be permitted to do these things and still escape infamy. The legal profession therefore cannot do much to purge itself. The remedy lies, as before stated, in the moral growth of the people. One of the great corruptions upon which a strong and consuming moral light ought to be [illegible] held, is the multitude of abuses attending the practice of the law. A public opinion is wanted which will make it impossible for a lawyer to live without infamy in a community where he hires out his services without regard to right or justice, and undermines society by securing immunity to offenders against its laws.

Oliver Dalrymple, of Dakota, has twenty bushels an acre this year on his wheat farm of 30,000 acres. This looks and is big; but there will be no prosperity for that country till such wheat farms are subdivided. A wheat farm of 30,000 acres means no families, but only hired men; no schools, no society; few of the amenities of life; no varied industry; work for a lot of "hands" three or four months only in the year, and for the remainder of the year idleness and solitude. Big farms are just what no country can afford to have, and just what any country should boast of least.

In nearly all localities throughout the north west the yield of wheat is far better than was expected. It is a common opinion that the dense smoke, shutting off or tempering the rays of the sun, has been highly beneficial to the wheat fields. The yield in nearly all places yet heard from is from one-fourth to one-half greater than the promise of six weeks ago. It would be pleasant to show our visitors our superb mountains and other scenery, but a good wheat crop on the whole is better. The mountains will still be here when they come again.

Burke said he could not frame an indictment against a whole people, and the Edmunds bill, which disfranchised only actual polygamists, seems to have been devised on a similar theory. But St. Paul found no difficulty in framing an indictment against the [illegible], so as to include not only those who commit such things [illegible] render them worthy of death, but all those who have pleasure in them that do them."

Only nine states—Virginia, Massachusetts, [illegible], Pennsylvania, New York, Louisiana, New Hampshire, Illinois and Ohio, have furnished the country with presidents. There [illegible] yet to be heard from, and more [illegible].

PARTY ISSUES.

A presidential campaign is approaching, and yet neither of the great political parties has a very clearly defined issue on which to make the campaign. The southern question, which has so long been a leading subject of controversy is settled. President Garfield, in his inaugural, made a noble appeal to the southern people to anticipate the verdict of the future by accepting in good faith, the results of the war. He was followed by President Arthur, who did not, even by the remotest allusion, recognize the existence of the south as a political entity in his message to congress, and all the people and that long chapter in our political history is ended. Mr. Arthur could not impeach the sincerity of that union of sentiment, that sentiment of nationality which was shown at the grave of the president, and the republican party will stultify itself if it again attempts to reawaken interest in this question. The next great topic of popular interest, is the revenue, and on this the difference between different sections of each party is clearer than the difference between republicans and democrats. The impression produced by recent declarations of party conventions, as well as by the votes in the last congress, is that the republicans favor raising a revenue in a way that will encourage domestic labor, and that the democrats favor the same thing, the only difference being one of practical adjustment so as to cover particular industries in separate localities. On civil service reform and the local Virginian question of paying or not paying her lawful debts, the parties are all mixed up. Members of both parties tumbled over each other at the beginning of the last session of congress in their eagerness to vote for civil service reform. In Virginia the democrats have placed themselves on the Mahone platform of readjustment. There remains of the old issues Mormonism. The republican party, in its first national convention in 1856, pledged itself to the annihilation of polygamy, and again in 1876 it demanded such legislation as should extirpate this relic of barbarism. But it still remains a hard, subtle and far-reaching difficulty more formidable than it was twenty-seven years ago. The republicans have been remiss in their duty, but have the democrats done anything? Do they now propose to do anything to americanize Utah, to break down the union rule of the Mormon theocracy? It is undoubtedly true that some of the leaders of both parties in congress have been corrupted by Mormon money. Although the republican party has not redeemed its pledges, its record is a little better than that of the democrats, but not enough so to make a very stiff plank in a party platform.

When we come to look for new and living issues, what are they? The democrats have one, of course. "The republican party must go," or as it is sometimes stated, "turn the rascals out." To this a very good reply has been made that that cry will not avail because the republicans have already turned the rascals out as soon as they were exposed. The republicans of Pennsylvania have, it is true, brought forward an issue, the division of the surplus revenue of the federal government among the states. This presupposes legislation which will give us a surplus of revenue, otherwise there would be none to divide. A distribution was once made forty years ago by the democratic administration then in power, although Calhoun declared that it was absurd and preposterous to tax the people for a revenue and distribute it again. It was not successful. It was a piece of empiricism similar to the greenback craze in the north and repudiation in the south. To resort to such a grotesque scheme now would give the protective tariff which it is desired to uphold, the coup de grace. When the country exacts taxes simply to distribute them among the people, the people will look upon the scheme with the same anxious solicitude that the lecturer did for his hat, when he saw it passing around among the audience without receiving any contributions; and when it returned said he was fortunate to get his hat back. The people will doubt whether they will get back as much as they give. We have too much confidence in the sanity of republicans to believe that this can become a distinctively republican measure.

Are there then no principles which the people desire to have control in the government in respect of which the parties differ? Crises may arise in which principles override parties. This was the case in the elections last fall. Those were not democratic victories over the republican party as a party. The New York Times has recently shown that in the election in New York the republicans lost over 200,000 votes while the democrats gained less than 1000 votes. Those were victories over a section of the republican party which is obnoxious to a large body of republicans. If there are no questions to bring out the differences between the parties, we are not sure that it is a wholesome state of things. Nothing is worse than stagnation. It breeds miasm in social and political life as well as in physical. Now is the time to invite discussion and to provoke it by the expression of views as to the measures of policy which should control the government. There is a wide range of principles touching the relations of capital and labor, and the relations of the government to corporations which are vital and germinant, and which, we believe, are soon to be the controlling ones in our government; and the party which evinces the most wisdom and nerve and solicitude for the people in dealing with these principles and adapting them to the emergencies which are bound to arise in the near future, will be the party of the future. "New occasions teach new duties." It is in the future rather than in the past that the makers of platforms must look for material.

REFORM IN MARYLAND.

In the political cyclone which swept through several of the northern states last fall, brushing away the party which happened to be in power in particular states, Maryland barely escaped a revolution. The republicans did elect two members of congress, and if they had not fallen into a trap set for them by their opponents and supported a fusion ticket in certain parts of the state they would have made greater gains. The same opposition to bosses which resulted in the sweeping democratic majorities in New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan was shown in Maryland. And it is gratifying to notice that this opposition did not expend itself in that election. It has grown stronger and more organized until it has become a formidable power with the governor of the state at its head, threatening to overthrow the fortified, disciplined and selfish power which rules the state. The existence of this machine is due to the same cause which produced the republican machines in other states—the absorption of public attention in national politics, and neglect to scrutinize the management of state affairs. At last it has been discovered that the state had fallen into the control of a mercenary set of men who have fortified themselves by every kind of political agency and enginery, and there was no abuse or wrong which did not have its open defenders or silent friends. Governor Hamilton has written a letter in response to an invitation of prominent "anti-machine" democrats of Baltimore in which he details step by step the blunders as well the misdeeds of the bosses, and shows their extravagance, their misapplication of funds which by law should have been applied to the reduction of the state debt, their creation of sinecures, and their hostility to any measures which would tend to make the primaries free meetings, to prevent bribery, and to make registration something more than a mockery and a fraud.

He recommends several reforms: "a more efficient law for the protection of primary meetings against violence, fraud and corruption;" "stringent and searching legislation against the corrupt use of money in elections;" "provisions for the fair conduct of elections," "securing that none but legal votes be cast, and "counted as cast." He urges reform in the manner of appointing to the civil service and pleads for a law against political assessments. In conclusion he says "I am too old to change. The settled convictions of a life time are not to be revoked. "The tinkling cymbals of a party name are nothing, but the substantial, underlying principles that organize unselfish masses of men for the good of mankind are everything."

The stand which he has taken will have a great influence upon the voters of Maryland who have not lost their personal integrity and political self-respect. This will be the people's year in Maryland, and the republicans have a good opportunity to show whether they are in favor of a government by the people in that state.

UTILITY OF LEGISLATORS.

The New York Sun, which has the perverse habit of telling the truth about public men where it is not disposed to lie about them, has gathered from the congressional record the speeches delivered by Mr. Pike, the newly elected senator from New Hampshire, while he was a member of the house. His first recorded speech was to the following effect: "I understand that that was the understanding." About a month later he made another speech which is also reported in full: "My colleague, Mr. Small, is still at home. If he was here he would vote no." The other speeches were a little longer, but of not much greater importance. The fact that Mr. Pike made no long speeches is rather to his credit. The ablest and most influential senator on the republican side, Mr. Edmunds, never makes speeches in the common acceptation of the term, though he speaks a great deal. He only speaks for the purpose of influencing legislation on the floor of the senate, never for the entertainment of his constituents in the Green Mountain state or the country at large. The gift of oratory is a very popular one in this country but it is in some respects an inferior gift—inferior to the executive talent and also to the judicial, and, in a legislative body, to the gift for debate, which Senator Edmunds possesses in a preeminent degree. In a legislative body like the United States senate, where there is no limit to speech-making under the rules, it is very desirable that there should be members distinguished for their silence. The New York Sun's ideal statesman is William S. Holman of Indiana, who is known as the "great objector" of the house, the "watchdog of the treasury," the man whose "I object" has ruled out many measures which contained an appropriation. In many instances, however, a denial of justice has resulted from the objecting habit of Mr. Holman. Many poor men with an absolutely just claim against the government have been deprived of their pay. It is in every sense as dishonorable to object to paying a just claim or to making a needed appropriation for a good purpose, as it is to rob the treasury through the misappropriation of public money. The Sun is not consistent in disparaging Mr. Pike for not introducing more bills and making longer speeches, and at the same time berating Mr. Holman for [illegible] bills and not even condescending to give the reasons for his objections to particular measures of legislation.

A MISAPPREHENSION.

Our special dispatches report the comments of certain eastern journals on the completion of the Northern Pacific railroad. Some of them express doubts whether there is soon to be business enough for this additional transcontinental line. Such comment discovers profound ignorance of the situation. Through business is not the main dependence of any transcontinental line. Three-fourths of the earnings of the Union and Central are from local traffic; yet, for twelve hundred miles they traverse deserts. The strength of the Northern Pacific will, in still greater degree, rest upon its local or way business. It traverses a country which already has a large traffic to offer it, and where no competition can hurt it. Most of the way the country abounds in great natural resources, which are destined to very rapid development. There are fertile lands, rich mines, timber, cattle and wool; and within [illegible] years a heavy population will be settled all along the line of the road, making a local traffic far in excess of that enjoyed by any other transcontinental line. Nor will the through business of the road be small. Oregon and Washington are empires in extent and resources, and within a few years will contain a million inhabitants and have a vast internal and external commerce. The development of other states, as Kansas and Minnesota, shows what is to be expected here, now that days of our remoteness and isolation are past. Let it be understood, however, that the strength of the Northern Pacific does not lie in its position as a transcontinental line so much as in its fortune, as the road which opens and develops a mighty country whose resources from the lakes to the Pacific are immensely superior to those of the country traversed by any other transcontinental line.

The Helena Independent says that Montana has the most heterogeneous population of any country in the world. "Of Indians, it has Crows, Piegans, Gros Ventres, Flat Heads, Bannacks and remnants of several other tribes. Of Mongolians, there are Chinese, Japanese and Laps. The Shemites are represented by Jews and Arabs. Africa sends us Copts, Congoes, Moors and Caffres. The Aryans are represented by Pilgrims, Norwegians, Russians, Poles, Swedes, Danes, Austrians, Hungarians, Prussians, Dutch, Swiss, Italians, French, Canadian French, and Half breeds, Spaniards, Spanish Americans, and Peons, English, Canadian English, and Half breed English, Scotch and Irish, Mennonites and Mormons." And the most discouraging thing is that there is a majority of no one nationality powerful enough to assimilate all the others so as to make one homogeneous people. What the result will be no one can tell, but the Independent believes that the various civilizing agencies there enjoyed will harmonize these conflicting elements, and that in the end the territory will have, as it had in early days, one of the best populations on the continent.

The catalogue of Pacific University and Tualatin Academy for the year 1883, just issued, shows that both university and academy are in a prosperous condition. The course of instruction is thorough, and the faculty reinforced by Rev. J. F. Ellis as acting president and professor of mental and moral science, is all that could be desired in ability and experience. The "old school" at Forest Grove has done much good work, and is proud of its record of thirty years.

Mr. Foster E. Roper, Springfield, Mass., says that his mother had been troubled with a lame knee, and could hardly walk. She made one application of the magical pain-reliever, St. Jacobs Oil, and was cured.

ANOTHER PIONEER'S WORDS.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 27.

Why are pioneers putting forth such frightful complaints about a trip to the east? Have they lost all their former independence? What railroad brought us here? What steamer? What stage coach? For one, I hope those who crossed in 1846, may not lose their self-respect, and beg for an opportunity to take a return trip. The same roads are open to us as existed then, with houses "no" under-stand" all along the route. We need not occupy six months, but may take our time and make ourselves more comfortable than we did or could in '46." What a noise for no use! I left my home with 50, paid my way honestly and fairly to Westport, and from thence to Oregon City worked my way. I did not see any thing so desirable for which I wished to visit the scenes of early life! I think no company on earth would find me begging or bumming my way. Let us show ourselves men and stop this whining. I am three score and six years old and [illegible] at my daily employment and expect to continue so as long time as I can. Your fellow traveler of 1846.

CHARLES W. STANE.

The Cincinnati Enquirer figures up that during his political career, Senator Pendleton has drawn from the government $69,300 in salary. Yet the Enquirer, curiously enough, cannot see why Mr. Pendleton should now want to crowd all other democrats away from a good thing."

[illegible] HOURS SUCCESSIVE "AMUS[illegible] [illegible] are noted for patient endura[illegible] [illegible] the best proof of their powers [illegible] [illegible] by the manner in which [illegible] [illegible] in their theatres. The [illegible] at 7 P. M., and continues at a [illegible] [illegible] reporters have looked in [illegible] to see at what time the perfo[illegible] [illegible] never able to sit it out. [illegible] one of THE OREGONIAN'S fo[illegible] [illegible] at 2 o'clock, attended by the sce[illegible] [illegible] cymbals, went in determined to [illegible] play. The theater was densely [illegible] and gallery jammed full, the l[illegible] [illegible] hundred or more spectators cl[illegible] [illegible] of the stage, barely leaving roo[illegible] [illegible] performers. At the time [illegible] more thrilling and intere[illegible] of fiddles and the crash [illegible] deafening. The heavy villain [illegible] and "still pursued" two fam[illegible] [illegible] was, a part of the time, a court [illegible] of the time a battle field. The [illegible] sword and shield, like a templar [illegible] combat with a fellow armed [illegible] villain conquered, and then drag[illegible] [illegible] the stage and wound up the per[illegible] [illegible] din of music, by cutting [illegible] their vitals out, which ple[illegible] audience with delirious joy, and at [illegible] 3 o'clock on Monday morning, the [illegible]. The council should listen to [illegible] persecuted residents in the vicini[illegible] [illegible] close it at midnight. There [illegible] Chinamen should be allowed to [illegible] and destroy the peace and rest of [illegible] nothing of demoralizing the [illegible] hours that they are unfit for [illegible] next day.

[illegible] A PARDON.—Mrs. Murphy, [illegible] who was sent to the penitent[illegible] [illegible] for ten years last spring, is [illegible] [illegible] people to sign a petition to the [illegible] husband's pardon. She has alr[illegible] [illegible] names enough upon paper [illegible] of about two feet in length. An[illegible] signatures of many of the wealth[illegible] [illegible] citizens of Portland. [illegible] of operating is almost always [illegible] especially among those people w[illegible] [illegible] the circumstances of her husband's [illegible] beyond the shadow of a dou[illegible] deliberately committed forgery, [illegible] times, endeavoring to make a who[illegible] soliciting signatures to her petitio[illegible] always accompanied by her little [illegible] the two cry and moan until [illegible] give their names more to be rid [illegible] than anything else. With all to[illegible] that there is not one of any of the [illegible] or of any one who had anyt[illegible] trial, all these knew how well [illegible] was deserved as a criminal, [illegible] pity they may feel for the wi[illegible] would never consent to release s[illegible] ety. Jailer Doherty says Murphy [illegible] worst men that ever left this c[illegible] while in jail he was full of tric[illegible]. CITY.

Short House Successful Amusement.—The [illegible] are noted for patient endurance, and probably the best proof of their powers in this respect is furnished by the manner in which they sit out performances in their theatres. The performance of [illegible] and continues at a very late hour. [illegible] reporters have looked in on their way [illegible] at what time the performance ended, but were never able to sit it out. Sunday night, however, one of The Oregonian's force, on his way home at 1 o'clock, attracted by the sound of the gong and cymbals, went in determined to see the end of the play. The theater was densely crowded, dress circle and gallery jammed full, the lobbies crowded and a hundred or more spectators clustered on the sides of the stage, barely leaving room for the antics of the performers. At the time passed the play became more thrilling and interesting and the music of fiddles and the crash of cymbals more deafening. The heavy villain came to the front and "still pursued" two females while the hero was, a part of the time, a court of justice, and part of the time a battle field. The villain armed with sword and shield like a templar of old, had a terrific combat with a fellow armed with a trident. The villain conquered and then dragged two women upon the stage and wound up the performance amid a deafening din of music, by cutting them open and taking their vitals out, which performance filled the audience with delirious joy, and at five minutes past 3 o'clock on Monday morning the audience dispersed. The council should listen to the prayers of the persecuted residents in the vicinity of that theater and close it at midnight. There is no reason why Chinamen should be allowed to be kept out [illegible] and destroy the peace and rest of honest people, to say nothing of demoralizing the servants who are unfit for their domestic duties next day.

Wants a Pardon.—Mrs Murphy, the wife of the [illegible] who was sent to the penitentiary from this county for ten years last spring, is now engaged in begging people to sign a petition to the governor for her husband's pardon. She has already succeeded in getting names enough upon paper to aggregate a roll of about two feet in length. Among these are the signatures of many of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of Portland. Mrs. Murphy's manner of operating is almost always certain of success, especially among those people who do not know of the circumstances of her husband's crime. It was proven beyond the shadow of a doubt that he not only deliberately committed forgery but repeated the same, endeavoring to make a wholesale swindle. In soliciting signatures for her petition Mrs. Murphy is always accompanied by her little girl, and [illegible] the two cry and [illegible] until business men [illegible] give their names merely to be rid of the annoyance more than anything else. With all the names upon the list there is not one of any of the county or state officials or of any one who had anything to do with the trial. All these knew how well Murphy deserved [illegible] as a criminal, and however much pity they may feel for the wife and mother, they could never consent to release such a man upon society. Jailer Doherty says Murphy was one of the worst prisoners that ever left this county, and that even while in jail he was full of trickiness and [illegible]. Those business men who allow their sympathy to be worked upon by Mrs. Murphy are surely [illegible] of her husband's depraved nature.

Services Appreciated.—On the 24th of last June bridge No 226 on the Oregon and California railroad near Albany took fire. The Albany fire department, by quick and hard work saved considerable of the company's property. Thoroughly appreciating the services rendered by the Albany firemen, the company ordered at Henrichsen & Greenberg's two solid silver fire trumpets at a cost of $400. They are now on exhibition in the window of the manufacturers' establishment and will be presented in a few days. The trumpets are beautifully embossed and ornamented with solid gold tassels. At the mouth of each is a representation of a burning bridge. Approaching it in one direction is seen a train of cars, while in the opposite direction there is seen coming a steam fire engine and a hose cart. On the reverse side of the trumpet there is inscribed: "Presented by the Oregon and California railroad to Alert Engine Company No 1 of Albany for valuable services rendered in saving property of the company at the burning of bridge No 226 on Sunday, June 24, 1883." On the other there is the same inscription except that "Albany fire department" takes the place of the engine company. The trumpets are unquestionably the handsomest and most tasteful ever made here and reflect much credit on the firm who produced them.

Rich Diggings Discovered.—It has been some time since a genuine mining excitement has been developed in this section, and now that the railroad is completed it seems that an effort is to be made in that direction. The Colfax Gazette states Jo Farmer lately returned from a prospecting trip in the Coeur d'Alene mountains, and informed his friends that he had discovered a rich deposit of coarse gold at the headwaters of the Coeur d'Alene river about eighty miles above the point where that stream empties into the lake. Immediately on receipt of this intelligence, Hon. Horace H. Stratton and an experienced miner started for the golden land. In one day and a half with the use of a pan only they were able to collect about five or six dollars in the gold, not having the facilities for saving the fine gold. He returned to Farmington, gathered a company of ten or fifteen men and with necessary tools and appliances started again for the gold fields. The gold region lies in a big basin, and is almost completely surrounded by high mountains. It will be necessary to remove about twelve feet of earth to reach the bed-rock, but the soil is heavily loaded with the gold. The party have a whip-saw and are sawing lumber to construct sluice boxes and other necessary appliances for saving the fine gold.

A Unique Dwelling.—It is a fashion among [illegible] of means when they build residences for their occupancy to adopt a style and arrangement different in some way from every other residence they have ever seen, but it has been left to a Teuton, the cooper on First street near G, to construct a habitation sui generis—unapproachable in originality of design. He lives in a tub. It is located on G street, just around the corner from First, within the high fence around the vacant lot. The tub is oblong, being about ten feet long, six feet wide and eight feet high. Rafters six inches high are laid, upon which there is a tongued and grooved roof covered with tin. The roof overhangs the tub several inches, and the space between the top of the tub and the ceiling serves alike for ventilation and light. A door of the usual size is the means of entrance. The inner walls are painted white, [illegible] the ceiling, and an ingrain carpet of neat design covers the floor. The furniture consists of a washstand, two chairs, an open stove connecting the ventilator with a pipe outside, a narrow bed swung hammock fashion, several cheap engravings and a swinging shelf containing books. A woman's supervision could not make the dwelling neater. Mr. Tubin is a bachelor and [illegible] out.

Suits for Damages.—Suit was commenced in the U S circuit court yesterday by John Gilmore to recover $10,000 damages from the Northern Pacific Railroad company for injuries incurred while in the service of defendant. The complaint alleges that Gilmore was employed as a laborer, was set to thawing giant powder, the company well knowing he was wholly ignorant of the proper manner of thawing it, and that he was not furnished with proper appliances for thawing it; that while in the discharge of his duty the powder exploded, with the plaintiff was burned and mangled in his body and in the members thereof, and was permanently disabled, disfigured and maimed, and is now a physical wreck, and that the [illegible] to him has been the amount claimed. H. M. McGee also brought suit against the company to recover $10,000 damages, alleging that while in the employ of the company as a laborer he was thrown to the ground on account of the negligence of the company in not providing proper scaffolding, and had some of his bones broken and suffered great physical injury.

A Relic Recreation.—In the reporters' room of The Oregonian is the human skull which was dug up and found out on the Canyon road and it attracts considerable attention from visitors. All the reporters were busy last night, as a gentleman entered the room [illegible] one seemed willing to stay and entertain him. His gaze was fixed on the skull as the reporter from Dunbar stopped in. "You [illegible] just as that skull of a man who [illegible] and wanted a retract." "Friends never [illegible] [illegible] since [illegible]" "The whole business [illegible] out in the back room [illegible] to see it?" "[illegible] I believe those doubts [illegible] up a triad, the interesting relic you are [illegible] you is all that I have left of my poor dear departed grandfather. He was my exact prototype, [illegible] a man of remarkably brilliant mind; [illegible] United States senator from Pike county [illegible]" But the stranger was gone, and for half an hour nothing was heard but the sound of the rushing pencils.

Losing Almost Hope.—The wind still has [illegible] north and the smoke continues to pile up [illegible]. Yesterday was the smokiest day of this smoky season. It was scarcely possible to see across the river. If the season of things continues till our distinguished guests arrive they will imagine that the Willamette is the Stygian flood and will be looking for a web footed Charon to ferry them across. But it is to be hoped a wind may come on to blow and [illegible] far from the south and blow the smoke to the west. Two weeks are to elapse before the last party are to arrive and wonders can be done in the way of rain in that time.

Defending Herself.—There will appear before Justice White to-day for trial, Mrs Ida Reynolds, charged with assault and battery upon one J. C. King. Mrs Reynolds is a chambermaid at the St George hotel and King has been a boarder at that same caravansary. He claims that without any provocation whatever she slapped his face and poor unprotected male that he was, he feels [illegible] must seek the protection of the law. Mrs Reynolds, however, tells a very different story. She says King insulted her grossly and she gave him what he deserved so far as it lay in her power to do. It is to be feared that this man King has placed himself in a position where it becomes the duty of the public press to throw some light upon his character and questionable occupation in this town. He came here a few weeks ago and announced himself to be the president of the Gamblers and Courtesans Reformation Board whose headquarters were at Cleveland, Ohio. According to his story he himself was a reformed gambler, and had been such for three years, having been pretty low in the depths of human degradation during some of the mining excitements in Colorado, notably at Leadville and Durango. He was familiar with fallen women and all manner of sin, shame and crime during those times. Now he migrates to the northwest coast, appears as a full fledged evangelist and announces that he is ready to save the lowest of the low. Perhaps he is all he claims to be, but there are plenty of men in this city—some of them respectable enough and others of his own [illegible] before he reformed—who denounce him in unmeasured terms as a fraud who plays the fanatic as a [illegible] means of getting money out of honest people. His [illegible] in this town has not been conducive [illegible] good opinion of him. He has no business [illegible] never been seen to do any work. He claims to have plenty of money furnished him by the [illegible] of which he is president and the principal [illegible] he makes of such donations is to [illegible]. He is invariably to be seen smoking at all [illegible] cigars of a good quality. At [illegible] he continues to visit the haunts [illegible] can be found any night at the variety theaters, the gambling hells or in a [illegible]. When he meets an abandoned [illegible] as he says, he accosts her and offers to help her [illegible] in society. He has made the statement that there are 5060 fallen females in Portland. No one of any sense believes this, and all [illegible] are equally absurd. The man is [illegible] his right mind or he conveys some [illegible] with the fanatical look. Some of [illegible] seem as though the latter was the true [illegible]. Mrs Reynolds, if she was insulted, [illegible] the only woman who has occasion to think so, [illegible] this man had obtruded his [illegible] presence upon her. In his pretended [illegible] for women to [illegible] he has made several egregious mistakes and [illegible] that those women have in every case been defenseless he would have had occasion to make a complaint of assault and battery with good cause. About a week ago King called at this office and after making some statements in regard to himself announced that he was going to deliver a lecture in the Hall Street M. E. Church that evening and would like [illegible] leave a synopsis for publication. Inquiry developed the fact that he did not lecture, and had no authority for saying that he would. The manuscript that he left was not only blasphemous but indecent. Although he called the next day to see why it was not published, he was supposed to be some harmless crank and was dismissed with little further thought. Now that he is making himself so generally known everyone should know who and what he is.

Chinese and American Gamblers Arrested.—Last night the police raided a Chinese gambling game on Second street and secured in one bunch sixty-two devotees of the fascinating [illegible]. As usual the heavy sledge had to be used to gain entrance, and the massive doors succumbed to the powerful blows of the Herculean Holeman. The players were corralled by their queues ten in a bunch and taken to the city jail. A Chinese pawnbroker put up $10 bail for each of the players and $200 each for two proprietors—total, $1020. Shortly after midnight Paul Fahy's bank, corner of First and Alder, was "pulled," and nine professional gamblers—no customers of the bank—were run in together with the proprietors. All gave fictitious names and deposited $10 each. Fahy put up $200. Grand total receipts of the evening from one sort of misdemeanor $1310.

Some One's Neglect.—When Columbian Engine Company No 3 dissolved its organization with the advent of the paid department a resolution was passed donating to the Rockbottom Hose Company of Binghamton N. Y. the roll board of the company. This was in memory of the late Tommy Holton, once a member of the New York company. The matter was placed in the hands of a committee who were supplied with funds for its transportation. No acknowledgment of the remembrance was received and Three Alboys considered the shipment was lost en route until yesterday, when one of the members who had run with the machine ever since the company was organized discovered the roll board alongside of a carpenter shop, one of the [illegible] streets covered with dust. An explanation is in order.

Tracklaying in Portland.—Yesterday morning the Northern Pacific railroad began laying track from this city towards Kalama. Work was commenced near the west side round house, below A new city dock, and will be continued out North Front street past Weidler's sawmill for four miles, where it will meet the tracklayers coming this way from Richard's Landing. An engine and six cars from the Oregon and California were loaned to the Northern Pacific for the work. Tracklaying over the length of the branch between Portland and Kalama will be finished early in September, several days before Mr Villard and party will be ready to go to the Sound.

Will be Accommodating.—The Transcontinental Company will have all their cars at the First street entrance of the pavilion Thursday evening after the close of the Beecher lecture, and will carry passengers each way on Third street. They have six cars in operation now and two more are coming on the State of California, due to-day. If possible, they will be placed on the line Thursday. It is the intention of the company to have cars at the corner of Third and Pine streets at the close of [illegible] at New Market this winter. Such action will no doubt spur Joe Holladay to imitation, and then the Transcontinental company will be hailed as double benefactors.

The Baker City Branch.—J. H. Shepherd, publisher of the Bedrock Democrat at Baker City, is in town to purchase the necessary materials to enable him to get out a daily paper to be called the Sage Brush. He states that a few days since 400 teams from the Short Line passed through Baker City to go to work on the O. R. & N. Co's road. Last Wednesday ground was broken twelve miles from Baker City. Cars will be running from Pendleton to Meacham's near the summit of the Blue mountains on September 10, and it is expected that the road will be completed to Grande Ronde in time to move this season's crop.

Board of Equalization.—The Multnomah county board of equalization met at the court house yesterday. Property owners who object to the assessor's valuation of their property will please call and show the validity of their reasons. Citations were served upon the following named persons to appear and show cause why their taxes should not be increased: L. L. Hawkins, Martin Winch, Mitchell Lewis & Co, Wm Reid, F. Ordtz, D. J. Levy, Boston Clothing House, F. C. Morse, Virginia Watson, W. W. Espey, Jacob Kamm, P. L. Willis, Larsen & Co, Schofield & Tevis, Watson, Wright & Co, Mark Levy.

Beecher's Last Lecture.—The box sheet was ready this afternoon for the sale of tickets for Mr Beecher's great lecture at the pavilion next Thursday evening. Many seats are already taken. There will doubtless be a large attendance from all points outside the city, as the transportation companies have reduced the fare between all points to excursion rates for Thursday and Friday trains, giving everybody an opportunity to hear the distinguished orator's opinion on Woman Suffrage and The Reign of the Common People.

Clackamas County Court House.—Judge White of Clackamas county, who visits Portland at frequent intervals, reports the foundations of their new court house as well under way. He has charge of the construction and claims that when it is done it will be the best foundation in the state. The total cost of the building is to be $30,000, and a pretty good structure can be put up for that money. The basement will be seven feet above the surface of the ground, thus furnishing plenty of light and good ventilation for the jail.

Avaricousness.—A woman old enough to have a little sense, after causing the arrest of a ten year old child for slapping another of about the same age, and seeing the case dismissed before it came to trial, had the hardihood to attempt to collect witness fees upon the subpena as the prosecuting witness. Judge Moreland read the woman a deserved lecture, but the only feeling she seemed to exhibit was because she had not made any money out of all the fuss she had undergone.

Aground for a Short Time.—Yesterday morning just before daylight the steamer Oregon, in making the S curve at the foot of Swan Island, got too much suck on one side and ran her stern high and dry on the mud bank. There was deep water all around her. The steamers S. G. Reed, Willamette Chief and S. T. Church went to her assistance and in fifteen minutes had her afloat. She proceeded on her way and arrived at Astoria at 4:30.

Life and Matter.—A lecture will be delivered in the hall of the Young Men's Christian Association on Friday evening of this week by the Reverend William Mercer, B. A. Subject: "Life and Matter." Free tickets may be obtained at the rooms. Mr Mercer is a graduate of Cambridge university, England, and well known in Chicago as a talented and eminent divine.

DROWNING.

About 1 o'clock this morning the night-watchman of the steamer Ordway, familiarly known as George, fell from the boat, which was moored near Weidler's saw mill, and drowned. Just how the accident happened could not be learned at the late hour. A messenger was dispatched to Ash street dock for grappling hooks and search for the body was commenced an hour after the drowning.

Later.—The body was recovered.

POLICE COURT

From the crowd which thronged the police court yesterday a stranger would have supposed that a circus was giving an exhibition there. And had that stranger forced his way into the court he would have seen a performance that would have interested him. The dock was completely filled with drunks and criminals of various kinds, while the room inside the bar was crowded with unlicensed liquor dealers who watched the trial and fining of their victims with much interest, and were thereby enabled to form a correct idea of the effects of the traffic in which they are engaged.

Quite a passage at arms occurred between Counselor Campbell and Assistant District Attorney Mulkey. Campbell wished to have a client discharged on a technicality. Mulkey looked at him out of the corner of his eye as much as to say "Don't you wish you may?" The case was argued sharply and briefly, but it ended in Mulkey carrying his point, and the case was set down for to-day.

Josh Burns, proprietor of a nuisance on First street, was charged with running the Gaiety theater without a license. He pleaded not guilty and will probably be discharged, for it is difficult to imagine of any conceivable manner of proving that the infernal noisy den he runs is a theater.

F. B. Hope, charged with stealing a fork, pleaded not guilty and had his case continued till to-day. It is to be hoped Hope is innocent and that he remembers that fingers were made before forks.

The cases of the unlicensed liquor dealers was again postponed, as many of them were about to take out license. Those failing [illegible] will be tried to-day.

Wm Anderson, a slouchy young fellow, charged with roaming the streets after midnight without any business, pleaded guilty and was sent below for ten days.

The case of [illegible] charged with adultery was also continued till to-day.

China Charley was held to answer in $300 for stealing a pair of boots.

BRIEF MENTION.

The Idaho arrived last night from Alaska.

Last afternoon and evening of Sherman & Hinman's circus.

Ballasting of the westside road has been finished northward as far as Hillsboro.

Necessity, like each of a number of briefless barristers who haunt the police court, knows no law.

Sunday night the residence of Councilman Scoggin was entered by burglars who stole everything in the way of eatables contained in the kitchen and pantry.

The county surveyor has finished the survey of a new road which comes to Scottsdale station from the old road running some distance south of there. The new road is a matter of great public convenience.

The State of California arrived in yesterday afternoon and [illegible] 4 o'clock. Owing no doubt to the dense smoke she was not able to make her way here last night, and had not arrived at 2:30 this morning.

Samuel Waddel, a prominent citizen of Bloomington, Ill., who has been attending the conclave at San Francisco, will arrive here on the State of California on a visit to two of his sons who reside here. J. Waddell, one of them who is bookkeeper at Marx & Jorgensen's, met with a painful accident yesterday. While handling a bottle it broke and his hand was severely cut.

MORE INQUIRIES ABOUT THE EXCURSION

THE DALLES, Ogn, Aug 27

To the Editor of the Oregonian

Many pioneers in this portion of the country cannot understand the official construction of Mr Joseph Watt in regard to the pioneer excursion. Hoping you could give us a more correct idea I write you on the subject.

First. Who are meant by female relatives? Does it include all females, or only those not pioneers?

Second.—Must tickets be paid for in advance to destination. In other words would a pioneer be allowed to take a ticket to St Paul and then if he wished to go on to Chicago and New York pay the balance of rates en route? Information on these points will decide several persons in going or not going.

J. B. DICKERSON

[The rate of $60 to St Paul and to Chicago, etc., applies to all members of the Pioneers' Association, women as well as men. The higher rate, $70, additional, is for female relatives of non Idaho pioneers.

It is generally understood that tickets must be paid for in advance to destination. The reduced rate on eastern roads cannot be secured at St Paul or Chicago.]

AMUSEMENTS

Sherman & Hinman's Circus.—The tent contained a fair crowd last night. There will be two performances to-day, afternoon and evening, positively the last appearance in the city. Those who have not seen the unrivaled trained horses, the great Morosco brothers and Gorman's daring bareback riding should not neglect this opportunity.

The Spanish Students.—New Market theatre was well filled last evening upon the second appearance of the Madrid Spanish Students in their unique entertainment. The music produced on guitars and mandolins is a fascinating character, which once heard creates a desire for more. Last night's programme was so varied as to please all the educated music lovers and those who are moved by a concord of sweet sounds without being able to tell why. The engagement is for this week only.

ALL INDIANS TO HELP CELEBRATE!

To the Editor of The Oregonian

YAKIMA, W. T., Aug 24

I see by the publication in The Oregonian of the 20th inst of the partial programme as arranged by the committee in charge of the celebration upon the completion of the Northern Pacific, that the celebration is to be in many respects worthy the great event it is to commemorate—the greatest and most important that ever has or ever will concern Oregon and Washington. I see that the pioneers and the Chinese are to take part in the celebration, but no mention is made of Indians. Poor Lo has been entirely overlooked. As the state of Oregon and territory of Washington were but recently all his, I think he should be invited to look on the celebration of an event that "foreshadows the early extinction of Indian country" in said state and territory. The visitors from the east and especially those from foreign countries who have never seen Indians till they come west would be pleased and interested in seeing specimens of our aborigines. I think that if invitations were given by the committee to the agents of the different Indian agencies in Oregon and Washington to bring with a liberal specimen of both their most civilized and wildest Indians and transportation and subsistence tendered same by the princely committee, that from most such agencies Indians could be present to add interest to the celebration. The harvest being over and the berrying, hunting and hop picking seasons having commenced, perhaps a majority of the Indians of most of said agencies are away from their reservations. This cause, together with the shortness of the time, will make it difficult to gain a gathering from all said agencies, but a number [illegible] as many could be present. Besides the interest the Indians would add to the celebration, the opportunity given them to witness the pageantry of this grand celebration would give them a much higher idea of the vast energy and progress of the white man and do much to hurry the Indian on to civilization and extermination in the white man's tribe.

"POOR LO'S" FRIEND

THE YARN ABOUT NOAH'S ARK

How the Story of the Discovery of It Probably Originated

Louisville Daily News

Some years ago I met in Egypt Mr Garvy, then and I probably still an engineer of high position in the service of the government, and who distinguished himself during the late war by his heroic efforts to aid the English residents to embark in the vessels sent for them. He had previously many years before been in the services of the Russian government and had been sent to the neighborhood of Mount Ararat for some object which I now forget. But I recollect as likely many others do who had the pleasure of knowing Mr Garvy hearing him mention that, prompted by curiosity, he had ascended the summit of the Mount and remained some days on a visit at the monastery where he was then there; that the monks stated to him that the roof of the apartment assigned to him, and I think some others, was composed of the ribs of the ark. Mr Garvy said that he examined the structure very closely and that it bore all the appearance of the roof being supported by the ribs of a vessel and that wood appeared very old. He also said that a few years after his visit the monastery was destroyed by an earthquake and that he had never heard what became of the alleged ribs of the ark. I do not profess to believe that part of the ark was incorporated into the monastery. I merely tell the tale as it was told to me, so I am sure Lord and Mr Garvy, so too probably did the monks who no doubt got the story from their predecessors.

The Site of Jamestown

Changes in the James river have made an island of Jamestown, completely separating it from the mainland, and about all that remains of the first English settlement of Virginia is the dilapidated tower of the old church. It was here that Pocahontas embraced the Christian faith and was baptized by the name of Rebecca. The font used on that occasion now stands in the chapel of Christ's church, Williamsburg. Here also Pocahontas was married to John Rolfe. A low brick wall incloses the ground occupied by the old tower and foundation of the church, and tombstones more broken and scattered some leaning against the wall and others with inscriptions nearly if not quite illegible, having a mere scrap to tell the [illegible] the dust of those who bore their names. Two hundred yards below the ruins and [illegible] from the river bank is the stately old mansion built by J. Ambler. Several [illegible] years ago it was the only residence on the island. It is now preserved and occupied by [illegible] H. D. B. Clay of [illegible] New York, who owns Jamestown, which consists of 1,000 acres, and is between two and three miles in length and three quarters of a mile in width.

The returns of the census taken on Jan 2, 1881, for the empire of Japan have just been published, and show that the whole country contains a total of 36,700,110 souls, of whom 18,598,998 are males and 18,101,112 females. The number of inhabited houses is 611,770, being an average of about five persons to a house. The population of a few of the leading towns are as follows: Tokio 1,772,333, living in 301,360 houses; Osaka [illegible] 418,591, living in 312,913 houses; Nagasaki [illegible] living in 25 [illegible] houses; Hakodate 67,667, living in 7,655 houses; Kioto, 800, 215, living in 19 [illegible] houses.

COMMON COUNCIL

A called meeting of the common council occurred last evening, Mayor Myers in the chair.

Present—Councilmen Crane, Kindorf, Laing and Smith.

A communication was received from Henry A. Morrow, grand marshal, asking the council to participate in the pending celebration in Portland. On motion of Crane the invitation was accepted.

Mayor Myers returned the ordinance providing for the purchase of property for the first ward H. & L. Co without his signature, for the reason that the price was exorbitant.

On motion of Crane laid over till next meeting.

The surveyor's report of the survey of Division street was accepted and the auditor and clerk instructed to give notice in accordance therewith.

A remonstrance against the improvement of Sixth street was on motion of Kindorf referred to the committee on streets to report at the next meeting.

An ordinance declaring the probable cost of improving Fifth street was carried.

A resolution providing for the issuance of warrants for the collection of assessments for the improvement of Ninth street was carried.

A communication was read from H. F. McMillan tendering his resignation as street commissioner on account of insufficient residence in the state. Accepted.

On motion of Crane the election of street commissioner was then proceeded with and on the fifth ballot C. B. Bartel was elected by a full vote.

THE NEW STREET COMMISSIONER

C. B. Bartel, the street commissioner elected at the council meeting last evening, is a resident of sixteen years standing, well posted on the needs of the city in matters connected with the position to which he has been elected, and moreover is thoroughly competent to discharge the duties of the office efficiently. A better and more worthy selection could not have been made and it is gratifying to know that not only has the street commissionership been settled but that probably the best available man has been secured for the position.

THE PARK RAILWAY

The proprietors of the Park Railway Co, designed to run between East Portland and Sellwood, are receiving much encouragement from those whom the scheme is calculated to benefit and there is no longer any doubt of the road being built and in operation at an early day. All the necessary material has been ordered and the company expect to have the road in operation in sixty days. It will be a regular narrow gauge, with cars operated by dummies. It is the intention of the company to eventually extend the road to Milwaukie. The route to the county road will be via L, Fifth, Stevens, Jefferson and Eleventh streets.

O & C EXTENSION NOTES

Hereafter there will be no regular monthly pay day on the Oregon and California railroad extension. Chances for robbery will be less.

Gen Cadwalader says it will be the 1st of May before trains run to Sacramento bridge, twenty six miles north of Redding.

The Chinamen who began work at the Buck rock tunnel about two weeks ago are not working on the tunnel approaches, but on a wagon road which is being extended towards the Soda Springs hotel on the Linkville road.

The location of the Ashland depot would seem to be no longer in doubt. On Saturday last Vice President Koehler, manager of the Oregon and California railroad, agreed to purchase the Lindsay Applegate farm in the eastern part of the town.

Mr Hurlburt, who was in town Wednesday, tells us that he expects to finish the locating survey down the southern slope of the Siskiyous to the junction by the first of next month, unless some unlooked for changes in the route should be required.

At the south end of the Siskiyou tunnel the Chinamen have been gaining on the land slide so that they can easily keep it out of the way of their work. As Mr Hurlburt says they now shovel the dirt out before it slides in. The heading work at that end will be commenced the last of this week or the first of next. Work on the north end is progressing well.

The Ashland Tidings says: The company are building a wagon road to near the Soda springs on the Linkville road down Carter creek from the location of Buck rock tunnel, as a large amount of teaming will be necessary to that locality during the progress of construction. The road may be extended from Buck rock to the south end of the Siskiyou tunnel, it is said.

The Flint dealer says there will be a car and house built at Glendale. Timbers and lumber for which are already sawed. As there is an up grade nearly all the way from [illegible] near Grants Pass extra engines will have to be used and the round house is being built for their accommodation. There is an ugly up grade through the big canon and [illegible] some point near may get a round house.

The Yreka Journal of Wednesday says: It is now reported that Assistant Chief Engineer Hood of the Central Pacific, the surveyors above Redding, said he would first see if the big tunnel above Sacramento bridge was finished before August [illegible] next year. The work appears to be progressing very slowly above Redding, but may move on more briskly when fairly under headway, as the work on the Oregon end was just as slow at the commencement.

A Shasta dispatch of Aug 14 says: The bridge at Spring creek on the California and Oregon railroad was completed yesterday. The rails were laid and the first engine crossed to-day. The work is progressing and the camp at Slaw's [illegible] at the mouth of Middle creek will be moved to [illegible] some eight miles further north in about two weeks. The [illegible] strike, but the railroad company has only until July 1, 1883, as apparently they are said to [illegible].

NOTES FROM AINSWORTH

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

AINSWORTH, August [illegible]

The first through car from the east—that of Intendent Anderson—passed down yesterday.

A rapidly increasing number of buildings for both business and residence uses are in course of construction.

The recent railroad accident at South Ainsworth was by nobody's fault, but was accidental.

Jack Moran recently shot [illegible] by Mike [illegible] in [illegible] cover [illegible] not much hurt. He is released.

Parties from up the road have brought out Frank [illegible] and opened their [illegible] Ainsworth, [illegible] gambling and gin mill [illegible] nitting, and from which emanates a daily attritional row of victims in all stages of decay. As this a rival of Hell's Elevated, another dreadful as well as house of prostitution, the ear of night is unceasing assailed by the shrill voice of the strumpet and the turgid oath of the pimp and blackleg.

Business of all kinds in this town is booming. Between 300 and 400 men are at work in various capacities for the railroad company, besides which there is a large floating gang of the depraved and criminal element of both sexes and some good men. For several days there has been a constant hegira from the front to the Yakima country of a hard looking crowd of spade showers and pick swingers, and the amount of tarantula juice they have imbibed en route has astonished even the gin jerkers of Ainsworth.

The railroad company has established an engineers camp on the west side of the Columbia about six miles above the Snake river at or near the point where the bridge for the Cascade division of the Northern Pacific will cross the former river. Work on the Snake river bridge is progressing more rapidly than at any previous time. One abutment and two piers are completed with the exception of the coping. Work on the south abutment and three other piers are under way. The new water piers are being constructed on the compressed air plan, which though very expensive at first are sure and solid. Mr Seguin, a practical bridge builder from the Missouri river, has charge of the construction of the caissons.

LA CENTER ITEMS

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

LA CENTER, Aug [illegible]

Lewis river is very low, so low that the light draught steamer Lena Mason failed to reach her dock at this place. The transfer of freight and passengers was made to a flat bottom scow.

The good people of La Center and vicinity are praying for the return of some three [illegible] hoodlums who made night hideous a few weeks since by repeatedly firing off their revolvers and who spent the day time in hunting grouse (as they said) but were in reality shooting the neighbors' hogs and throwing them into the river. Mr J. H. Smith drove them from his place with his gun after they had killed one of his hogs. Others found some of their hogs in the river with bullet holes in them. Whom the same parties will return next year and we will try to give them the reception they deserve.

FROM OLYMPIA

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

OLYMPIA, W. T., Aug 24

Owing to some irregularity in the management of the Western Union line between this place and Portland, the sin of which seems to lie at the door of the Portland office, I have been unable to transmit any news except by mail, which causes considerable trouble as far as news reports are concerned. It is to be hoped that the strike in your city may quickly be ended, so that we may soon become a part of the civilized world again.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE

The Washington Teachers' Institute has been in session in this city since last Tuesday, and a most interesting session it has been. The number of lady teachers in attendance on the institute was much larger than that of the opposite sex, which was decidedly to the credit of the former. The programme arranged by the executive committee was carried out in a very excellent manner, but in future it is expected that those intending to take part in the programme will notify the executive committee in time and thus be prepared to fulfill their promises.

On the last day of the session the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, C. W. Wheeler, territorial superintendent of education; secretary, J. F. Clarke; assistant secretary, Miss F. A. Anderson; treasurer, Prof. R. C. Kerr; executive committee, [illegible] E. Follansbee, Miss Mattie L. Hansee, Prof. J. F. [illegible].

It was decided to hold the next session of the institute at New Tacoma on the [illegible] of August 1884.

Among the visitors who arrived yesterday was President L. J. Powell of the Washington university, who took part in the exercises of the evening in a very able manner. The address last evening by G. V. Newell also was listened to with great attention, and was frequently applauded. His excellency, governor Newell, [illegible] the efforts of his institute [illegible] yesterday evening [illegible] and received a vote of thanks from the institute for his [illegible] the session.

The programme last evening being the closing one of the session was rendered very interestingly by the reading of [illegible] essays by the Misses Matt [illegible] Wace and F. A. Anderson, respectively, but the gem of the evening was the reading of a paper on the Development of [illegible] by Miss Mattie L. Hansee, one of the members of the faculty in Washington university, who is a [illegible] teacher [illegible] with the [illegible] this territory.

One of the most important things done by this institute was the [illegible] the following resolutions [illegible] the subject of temperance [illegible] which [illegible] every part of the territory. They are as follows:

The Western Washington Teachers' Institute [illegible]

1. That [illegible] evil of intemperance is doing much to destroy the physical and moral strength of our [illegible].
2. [illegible]
3. [illegible] Dr. Richardson's text book [illegible]
4. [illegible] this text book with every public [illegible].
5. That we recommend to the committees [illegible] the course of study to include in the [illegible] text book, Temperance Lessons by [illegible] Dr. Benjamin W. Richardson, M. A., M. D. and LL. D., author of the Cantor lectures on alcohol.

Should a similar resolution be adopted in eastern Washington it will be of more real benefit, especially to the young, than all the legislation that has ever taken place in the subject of education.

During the session the utmost harmony prevailed and the excellent manner in which the meetings were conducted by Superintendent Wheeler met with general approval.

Poisoned by the Bite of a Squirrel

Sedalia, Mo, Democrat

Conductor Barkley Smith of the Missouri Pacific is now suffering terribly from the bite of a pet squirrel belonging to the family of James Curran in Sedalia. One week ago yesterday while playing with the animal it bit him in the thumb of the right hand. The bite was painful but Dr Smith did not think much of it, supposing it would soon heal and be all right. But not so. It continued to grow worse until last Saturday, when his hand and arm were so swollen that it was necessary for him to take to his bed and call a physician. The wound has grown worse until the poor man is suffering intense pain. The swelling has gone into his arm and reached to the elbow. Every effort is being made to check its progress, and it was thought yesterday that the pain and swelling were subsiding. The great danger is that erysipelas is liable to set in.

A Frank Avowal

Says the Memphis Avalanche: A northern paper wants to know why Vincent, the thieving Alabama state treasurer, is not turned out of his hiding place and turned into the penitentiary? Well, there are two reasons—one is we can't find him, and the other is we don't want to find him. If he should accidentally turn up he would prove to be an expensive white elephant on our hands. It is true there might be the farce of a trial, such as is now going on in Pine Bluff, but in the end the prisoner will go scot free after considerable expense to the state. Better let well enough alone. When our high toned thieves get away don't bring them back until public sentiment reaches the point where a thief will be judged a thief whether he stole a mule or half a million of the people's money.

All ladies who may be troubled with nervous prostration, who suffer from organic displacement, who have a sense of weariness and a feeling of lassitude, who are languid in the morning, in whom the appetite for food is capricious and sleep at proper hours uncertain, should have recourse to Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

W. Friedlander has brought a large lot of novelties in jewelry and watches from Europe and sells them cheap. [illegible]

THE REIGN OF THE COMMON PEOPLE

SALEM NOTES.

[FROM THE OREGONIAN'S LOCAL CORRESPONDENT.]

SALEM, Aug 27

Several new houses are in course of construction.

Mrs. W. W. Martin went to Portland to-day to visit friends.

There were two cases of alleged insanity to be adjudged at the court house Saturday.

The mother of Mrs Judge T. C. Shaw is reported dangerously ill at Howell prairie.

Judge T. C. Shaw returned Saturday from Umatilla county. His wife remained to visit longer.

Lyman W. Smith went to Portland to-day to meet his wife, who has been visiting in Walla Walla.

Miss Mary Chadwick returned from Roseburg Saturday, where she has spent several weeks visiting friends.

Augustus Gilesy goes to Aurora to-day to visit his aunt, Mrs Elizabeth Menefee, who is there on a visit from Colorado.

C. C. Moor, superintendent of the blind school, went over to his Corvallis farm yesterday, and will return about Wednesday.

The Academy of the Sacred Heart commenced school this morning with favorable prospects for a large patronage the ensuing year.

Hon. H. W. Ayers, state printer, and the manager of the Statesman, went to Comstock's, Douglas county, to-day. He will return Wednesday.

The Pioneer oil works of Salem are running night and day. They will have enough seed to run them until [illegible] and will turn out about 3,000 gallons of oil.

The races here during fair week are already becoming subjects of interest. On the score of fancy will be the most interesting ever had [illegible] there will be [illegible] new city [illegible] for [illegible]. The [illegible] is covering [illegible] all. The following is a list of the horses now on the ground: Dr. Mosk of Walla Walla has six all trotters. J. W. [illegible] of Walla Walla has two. A. Hodson has three, all trotters. C. A. Frost has two, a trotter and a runner. D. R. Wells has five, including Woodbury. C. W. [illegible] of Portland has two trotters. Jim [illegible] of Vancouver four trotters. James B. [illegible] three trotters. Jerome Porter of Forest Grove, one runner and two trotters. Thompson & Paine of Prineville two runners. Adamson & Moley two runners. J. Ross of Lake county six all trotters. A great many more are on the way here. The above list speaks for itself. Come to the fair.

British Columbia Must be Ours

Chicago Herald

The acquisition of British Columbia has become a necessity. As is the case [illegible] to our [illegible] Alaska only by water, as we have no navy, we would not be able to get there at all if the British should see fit to object to our ships passing. The walking through British Columbia at some seasons of the year is said to be excellent and we do not wonder that the military authorities are looking out for a right of way to the great frozen elephant of our government, Alaska.

The largest object glass in use is the twenty six inch lens at Washington, with a focal length of thirty three feet. Its light gathering power is 10,000 times that of the unaided eye. They ought to mount it on top of the Washington monument and keep track of the presidential party.

THE POISONED PILLS.

A Story of Creole Life in the Earlier Part of the Century.

A MOST TERRIBLE DUEL.

How Swords and Pistols Were Ignored and Prussic Acid Pills and Claret Adopted Instead.

A duel, fatal to one of the principals and yet novel in nature, is detailed by a writer in the New Orleans Times-Democrat. It was between two young men of the Crescent city and occurred over forty years ago. The young men were Henri Delagrave and Alphonse Riviere, and the cause of the duel was the success of the former in wooing Mme. Celestin Riviere sought out Delagrave and found him in a gambling saloon. Riviere was very pale as he approached the group of men around the table. What with the yellow light shining through the curtains and his bloodless appearance, he seemed rather a ghastly corpse than a living body, but there was motion and a voice in him which soon dispelled such an illusion.

As he neared Delagrave, the latter turned to confront him, when Riviere, with a voice that seemed to come from behind the door of a tomb, said: "Delagrave, we cannot live on this globe together. It is not large enough."

Delagrave, quietly puffing his cigarette, in a cold and impressive tone replied: "Yes; you annoy me. It would be better if you were dead."

Riviere's face flushed, and reaching forward he laid the back of his hand gently against Delagrave's cheek. The game was at once interrupted. The slap, which was so light it did not even crimson the young man's cheek, was enough to call for blood, and leaving the house he sought an intimate friend; to him he opened his heart: "I must be a battle to the death." Such was the enmity between himself and Riviere, only a life could wipe it out.

The old doctor, who had grown up, it might be said, on the field, shrugged his shoulders and remonstrated, but at last acquiesced and said: "Very well, then, it shall be to the death."

Few people knew what sort of a party it was driving down the shell road bordering Bayou St. John. Two carriages stopped just on the bridge leading to the island formed there by the bifurcation of the bayou, and four gentlemen alighted. Savalle, a well known character here forty years ago, accompanied Riviere, and old Dr. Rocquet was with Delagrave. The seconds had met previously and arranged everything. Delagrave, as he stepped from the carriage, looked furtively around for the cases of pistols, but seeing none, he was a little disconcerted. After walking about 100 yards from the carriages, the party stopped and the doctor motioned them to approach closer. When they had done so, he called them by name and said: "Gentlemen, we have discussed the matter nearly all of last night, and both Mr. Savalle and myself feel satisfied that there is no solution to the difference between you but the death of one. The world is so formed that both cannot live in it at the same time." The two nodded. "Therefore," the doctor went on, "we have agreed to make the arbitrament as far as is possible, and let fate decide." He took out a black morocco case, and from it produced a pill box containing four pellets. "One of these," said he, "contains a positively fatal dose of prussic acid, the other three are harmless. We have agreed that each shall swallow two of the pills, and let destiny decide." Savalle inclined his head, and said, "as the representative of Riviere, he agreed."

The two men were pale, almost bloodless, but not a nerve trembled or muscle contracted.

"Gentlemen," said the doctor, "we will toss for the first pill." Savalle cried out "tails," as the glittering gold piece evolved in the air. It fell on a bunch of grass, the blades of which, being separated, showed the coin with the reversed head of the goddess of liberty uppermost.

"Mr. Delagrave, you have the first choice," said the doctor.

Reposing in the little box, the four little globes seemed the counterpart of each other. The closest scrutiny would not develop the slightest difference. Nature alone, through the physiological alembic of the human stomach, can tell of their properties. In one there rests the pall of eternity, the struggle for breath, the failing of sight, the panorama of years rushing in an instant through the mind, the silence and peace of sleep forevermore, the cerements, the burial case, the solemn cortege, and the close, noisome atmosphere of the grave. All these were contained in one of those little pellets. Delagrave, having won the first choice, stepped forward and took a pill. With a calmness which was frigid, he placed it on his tongue, and with a cup of claret handed him by the doctor, washed it down.

"And now, M. Riviere," said the doctor. Riviere extended his hand and took a pill.

Like his opponent, he swallowed it.

The two men stood looking one another in the face. There was not a quiver in the eyelid, not a twitch to the muscle. Each was thinking of himself as well as watching his adversary. One minute more passed. Two minutes passed. Three. Four. Five.

"Now, gentlemen."

This was the fatal choice. Both men were ready for the cast of the die. Savalle tossed the gold piece aloft and the doctor cried out "heads." "Heads" it was, and Delagrave took a pill from the box, leaving only one. "Now," said the doctor, "M. Riviere, the remaining one is for you. You will please swallow them together."

The two men raised their hands at the same time and deposited the pills on their tongues and took a draught of claret.

One second passed and there was no movement. Then—"Good God!" exclaimed Riviere, his eyes starting from their sockets. He turned half around to the left, raised his hands above his head and shrieked a long, wild shriek that belated travelers even to this day say they hear on the shell road, near the island.

He fell prone to the earth, and save a nervous contraction of the muscles of the face, there was no movement.

Delagrave took him by the hand as he lay on the damp grass, and said in a tender voice: "I regret it, but it was to be."

The funeral was one of the largest ever seen in New Orleans, and weeks the cafes were rung with the story of the duel. The beautiful widow, horrified at the affair, would never see Delagrave afterward, and is now a happy grandame on Bayou Lafourche, having married a wealthy planter two years after the fatal event.

Delagrave, weighed down with the trials of an unhappy life, wrinkled and tottering, strolls along Canal street of a warm afternoon, assisted by a negro servant. Having a bare competency he has never actually suffered from want; but he shows evidences of great mental anguish. The sight of a pill box makes him shudder, and the taste of claret will give him convulsions.

A Reckless Woman.

Peck's Sun.

"Well, sir," said the engineer, as he took a down hill, "all these accidents occur just by people trying to be smart. I have seen hundreds of farmers who would stop their teams far enough away from a track, so there would be no danger, but about one in ten act as though he owned the earth, and if he gets the hind end of his wagon over he thinks he has achieved something remarkable. I expect to kill a woman out here about a hundred miles one of these days. She drives an old black mare, and I think she lays for a train. She sees a train coming, and slaps the old mare with the lines and hurries on the track, and the old mare stops as though she was going to eat grass, and then the old lady looks up at me in the cab window, through her spectacles, slaps the old mare some more, and he meanders off the track just before I hit her, and the old lady looks back at me as the engine whirls past, and my heart is in my mouth, and she looks just as though she thought I was running that way for fun, and that I am an impolite thing, because I don't slack up for her. Some day the marsh out there is going to have a shower of black mare and buggy wheels and spectacles, and there will be crape on the old lady's door, and instead of a verdict of suicide, the coroner will blame the engineer, and her relatives will sue the company for damages."

Why the Strike Failed.

New York Evening Post.

The end of the telegraphers' strike is now formally admitted by the journal which has been most strenuous in its advocacy of their claims. It ascribes their failure to the reliance with or reliance on the "Knights of Labor," a mythical or nebulous body, and to the alarm excited among business men thereby. But this is a very incomplete explanation. The real and full one the history of the strike as made plain enough. The strike was based at the start on two expectations. One was that it would cause so much public inconvenience that the company would be coerced it to surrender either by legal process or by popular indignation. The other was that the pressure of inadequate wages would overwhelm the small force of operators which stuck by the company, or came to its relief. Both of these were disappointed. There was no legal mode of coercing the company, and the public instead of getting furious over the delays, cut down its telegraphing. The remedy for young single American men whose business does not pay them enough to live in the way they like has long been familiar to the public in the concise prescription of the late Horace Greeley.

"My hands were covered with little dry scabs. They have disappeared and I'm better than I have been for 20 years, from using Dr. Benson's Skin Cure." A. M. Noble, Selma, N. C., July 3, '82.

The Augusta (Ga.) Chronicle says that it is uncommon to find in that city a negro who cannot read and write, while there is much illiteracy among the white people.

WISE WILLIAM LILLY.

A Famous Astrologer Who Was Consulted by King Charles and Cromwell.

Baltimore News.

One of the most famous of astrologers was William Lilly, and his name occurs as often in journals and other publications of the periods of the protectorate and Charles II. that a brief sketch of his somewhat remarkable career may be of interest. He was heartily abused by some of the writers of the time. Butler, in "Hudibras," describes him under the name of the deluding man, Sidrophel—but on the other hand, both the kings Charles, Cromwell and many other distinguished persons consulted him frequently, and he was the friend and companion of some of the most learned men of the kingdom. Sir Elias Ashmole, after the astrologer's death, edited some of his works, and wrote him a handsome Latin epitaph.

Lilly was the son of very poor parents, and was born in the country. He did not come to London until he was about 18 years old. He began life as a footboy, and, when his master died, married his widow. At 30 years of age, he began the study of astral science, and his remarks in his autobiography, that he applied himself to these researches, "many times twelve, or fifteen or eighteen hours, day and night," well illustrates the extraordinary fascination this study has for those who are once induced to take it up. Lilly observes that his diligence was due to the fact that he was anxious to discover whether there was any verity in the art or not. When he had become tolerably skillful he began to practice publicly, and to issue forecasts regarding public affairs in almanacs and other publications. His judgments were so remarkably correct that he speedily acquired an extraordinary reputation. He was consulted by Oliver Cromwell before that sturdy warrior made his famous coup d'etat in parliament. In 1647 he was consulted by King Charles I. as to a safe place to conceal his royal person, but the king did not follow the advice given, and was consequently ruined. These things appear strange to us nowadays, and the idea of Mr. Evarts, Lord Beaconsfield or Prince Bismarck entering the study of an astrologer for a little light upon the political affairs, would seem the most ludicrous imaginable. Yet the wisest heads of England thought it not beneath their dignity to pursue this course when in difficulty only two centuries ago. Lilly himself mentions that in 1648, "for very great consideration," the cabinet council gave him £50 in cash and a pension of £100 per annum.

It is scarcely possible that all Lilly's predictions came out correctly by mere chance. He was, when at the hight of his fame, consulted by thousands, upon every imaginable topic, from the monarch anxious to the fate of a war to an old woman in perplexity as to the whereabouts of her lost dog, and if his art was all imposture or guess work he must infallibly have lost his credit on some occasions. He appears, however, to have maintained his reputation to the last, as, in the words of the "Merry Monarch," "one who understood astrology better than any man in Europe."

Lilly was frequently placed in positions where equivocation or Delphic answers would not do, and where the failure of the event to correspond with his prediction might have cost him his life. For instance, at the seige of Colchester, when the parliamentary soldiers grew doubtful of the issue and began to waver, some one sent for Lilly. Dark as the prospects were, he prophesied the surrender of the place, and so the event actually fell out. Lilly's two most famous predictions were made in 1651 when he issued "Monarchy or no Monarchy," in which he foretold the great fire and plague of London, which occurred in 1666. His prophecy of the fire was founded upon a very simple calculation. The ascendent of the city of London is 17 degrees 54 minutes of the sign Gemini. Lilly foresaw that in 1666 the fixed star called the Bull's North Horn, which is of the nature of Mars, would cross that point of the Zodiac, and so he readily prejudged that the city would be visited by a great conflagration. For this prediction he was afterward hauled up in parliament, and his autobiography contains a very interesting account of the investigation. He remarks with truth that no man was ever treated with more consideration and respect. He, however, stated frankly that he could not form any idea as to the origin of the conflagration, and the mystery has continued from that time to this.

Lilly was not without enemies, particularly among the Puritan clergymen, who attacked him both from the pulpit and in print. The most virulent was the Rev. Mr. Gataker, who took occasion to ridicule astrology whenever the opportunity offered. Lilly replied, and their controversy was one of the sensations of 1653. In the almanac issued by Lilly for 1654, among the observations for the month of August appeared this remark: "Hac in tumba jacet presbyter et nebulo," and truly enough, when August rolled round Mr. Gataker died, and their dispute ended with the event thus foretold.

To read the histories of those times and the biographical dictionaries one would imagine William Lilly to have been a mere knave and fortune teller, who preyed upon the credulity of his contemporaries without pity or scruple. It is quite forgotten that most of the important figures of that period were cool and practical intellects, not very easily duped. Oliver Cromwell was hardly the sort of a person to have been bamboozled by a rogue. It is also forgotten that Lilly was a good scholar, master of several languages, a close student of ancient literature, and by no means an unskilled writer. His autobiography contains a great deal of admirable writing. His famous work, "Christian Astrology," in addition to its value as an authority upon the subject of which it treats, proves him to have been not only a good mathematician, but to have possessed a most acute and penetrating intellect, and also a strong sense of humor. The dry way in which he tells of his sole fish, of the figure of the heavens he erected for the purpose of learning what had become of them, and of how he from this celestial source discovered and seized both thief and property, is almost inimitable.

It is doubtful if Lilly ever had his equal at horary astrology. Some of the examples he has given of his skill are masterpieces of analysis. He was so great an adept that in his work on the science he boasts that he has often found a mislaid book or glove by a figure of the heavens erected for amusement.

Lilly wrote his "Christian Astrology" under conditions so awful that it is repugnant to common sense to believe that he was the impostor he is described in history. He says that during the composing of his book of nativities he was "shut up for seven whole weeks of the plague, burying in that time two maid-servants thereof."

With a dreadful death immediately before his eyes and the pestilence ravaging his own household, it seems incredible that he could stoop himself to the composition of falsehood and imposture, knowing it to be such. Fair minded people will prefer to believe that he was sincere in what he wrote, and believed in the truth of that which he taught to others as truth, under the solemn appeal to Almighty God, which is so beautifully worded in his introductory epistle. But modern critics, as the learned Commander Morrison observes, see no force in this argument.

RALEIGH BEFORE HIS EXECUTION.

Gentleman's Magazine.

The eve of the day fixed for his execution Raleigh had taken a final farewell of his wife, and the interview between the two had lasted until the abbey had tolled the hour of 12. All business matters had been settled, and there was nothing, therefore, on the mind of the condemned man to interfere with the hopes and thoughts as to the unseen world into which he was about to enter. The king as a last favor had granted the wife, sped by to be made a widow, permission to bury the body of her husband after the headsman had done his fell work. "It is well, dear Bessie," said Raleigh, pressing her in the agony of one last embrace, "that thou mayst dispose of that dead which thou hadst not always the disposing of alive." So these two parted, never more to meet on this side the eternal silence. "God hold me in my wits," sighed the poor lady as she entered her coach, stationed under the very shadow of the scaffold, upon which in a few brief hours the blood of her husband was to be shed. As 8 o'clock struck Raleigh held himself in readiness to quit the gate house. A cup of excellent sack was now brought him, which he drank at a quaff. He was asked how he liked it. "As the fellow," he replied, "who drinking of St. Giles' drink, if a man might tarry by it." After this refreshment a procession was made to the scaffold, at the head of which walked the dean of Westminster. On the way to the old palace yard Raleigh met Sir Hugh Beeston, an old friend, whom he had especially requested to be present at the execution. Sir Hugh, to make sure work, got a letter from Secretary Lake to the sheriff to see him placed conveniently, and meeting them (the procession) as they came near to the scaffold, delivered his letter. But the sheriff by mishap had left his spectacles at home, and put the letter in his pocket; in the meantime Sir Hugh being thrust aside by the crowd, Sir Walter bade him farewell, saying: "I know not what shift you will make but I am sure to have a place." It was a bitterly cold October morning, rendered all the more sharp by a cutting east wind, and as Raleigh ascended the scaffold and prepared to address the mob that thronged the palace yard his limbs, enfeebled by confinement and ill health, trembled so visibly that he could scarcely support himself. The sheriff, observing this debility, offered to help his ill-fated charge down from the scaffold and take him to a fire, so that being warmed he might be the better able to deliver his dying speech. "No, good Mr. sheriff," said Raleigh, "let us despatch, for within this quarter of an hour mine ague will be upon me, and if I be not dead before then mine enemies will say I quake for fear." Then, holding on by the rail of the scaffold, he faced the crowd and thus began: "I thank God heartily that he has brought me into the light to die, and that he hath not suffered me to die in the dark prison of the tower, where I have suffered a great deal of misery and cruel sickness; and I thank God that my fever hath not taken me at this time, as I prayed to God it might not." After this preface he proceeded to deal with the charge brought against him. He denied that he ever entered into any plot with France, though he admitted, to save his life, he had attempted to escape into France. He denied that he had ever been counselled by Lord Carew and other lords to fly the country or that he had ever offered Sir Lewis Stukely money to assist him in escaping. "But, indeed," he acknowledged, "I showed him a letter that if he would go with me there should be order taken for his debts when he was gone; neither had I £10,000 to give him, for if I had had so much as that I could have made my peace better with it than in giving it to Stukely." He declared his only object in starting for Guiana was to discover the mine which really existed there. He denied that he ever intended to desert his men when at Trinidad, as had been alleged, or that he had been forced to return home by his men against his will. Nor was it true that he had carried with him to sea numerous pieces, and that the only object of his voyage was to get money into his hands; he had taken out but little money, and such as he had taken out he had brought back. "These be the material points," he concluded, "I thought good to speak of, and I am now at this instant to render up an account to God; and I protest, as I shall appear before him, this that I have spoken is true, and I hope I shall be believed."

Four Days in a Freight Car.

Workmen employed at Washington avenue wharf on Monday, says the Philadelphia Record, observed a small stick protruding from a hole in a freight car standing on the track. The stick kept moving around and the men decided to open the car. The door was thrown open, and there, to their great surprise, was a half starved lad. The boy's countenance was haggard, and he was too weak to walk. He was taken to the second district police station. Dr. Nebinger gave the boy some restoratives, and prescribed light but strengthening food. The boy told the following story: "My name is Frank Harris. I live in Chicago, where both of my parents were buried some time ago. I am 13 years old. I had no one to take care of me and I earned a few pennies whenever I could. On last Wednesday I saw the men loading the cars in the depot at Chicago. At dinner time, when the men left, the car was only partly loaded. I crept in and hid in the corner behind a big box. I thought I would take a short ride and when I got out into the country I would get off the car and find work. The men came back and filled the car and locked the door. That afternoon we started off and I have been in the car ever since. We often stopped and I hollowed, but I could make no one hear me. Then we would rumble off again and I would throw myself back and cry. I don't know how long I was in there or how far we went."

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

MONDAY, Aug. 27.

Wheat—The spirit of inaction still pervades the market. As far as can be learned there is no pressure on the part of shippers, who hold off for either a lowering of seller's pretensions at home or a better market abroad. To-day's foreign advices show a very dull market in England with a decline of three pence per quarter on cargoes for shipment.

Freights—The freight market is unchanged.

The Br bk Chasca from Liverpool brings 30 csks 1137 cs liquors, 11 rolls floor cloth, 10 bbls vinegar, 175 tons salt, 224 pkgs chemicals, 9 cs saddlery, 53 tons cannel coal, 100 bbls Paris white, 400 boxes Bath bricks, 55 tons pig iron, 250 bdls iron, 22 cs galvanized iron, 64 boxes tin plates, 250 boxes terne plates, 200 bbls cement, 2 cs blue, 1 cs cottons, 25 cs oilman's goods, 1 carriage.

The bkt Melancthon from San Francisco brings 51 stoves, 22 pkgs castgs, 24 cs hardware, 1 cs boots, 35 doors, 26 pkgs furniture, 1 cs benzine, 252 bbls, 53 boxes, 5 tcs 4 cs glassware, 14 csks earthenware, 15 csks crockery, 3 cs lanterns, 3 cs glass, 70 cs coal oil, 1 trunk, 6 carloads said, 127 pcs lumber, 1 cs rubber, 4 bdls shovels, 184 pkg machinery, 20 boxes bottles, 11 csks Paris white, 3 .. gornbils, 35 kgs, 2 bf cs powder, 180 pkgs agricultural implements. For Astoria she had 19 pkgs furniture, 29 stoves, 15 pkgs castings, 35 pkgs stove fixtures, 1 csk earthenware, 20 cs coal oil, 6 bbls oil, 1 piano, 6 bbls porter; also 200 bales hay, 321 sks feed for Bunker Hill.

Receipts for past twenty-four hours have been 685 ctls wheat, 294 bbls flour, 712 ctls oats, 1000 lbs millstuffs, 15,612 lbs wool, 7135 lbs hides, 77 pkgs eggs, 69 pkgs fruit, 9 pkgs butter, 102 bbls lime; also 13,295 c.. wheat, 820 lbs wool from the eastern section.

SHIPPING NOTES.

The Oregon sailed at 4 A. M., ran aground at Swan Island, and got off at 1:30 A. M.

The Chasca will commence discharging to-morrow at Flanders's dock.

The Walla Walla sailed for the Sound yesterday.

New York Freight Market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—[Special.]—The California clipper freight market is quiet and unchanged. Tonnage is still scarce, as there are few vessels fit for the California trade bound for this port. Still both lines are supplied at present. The Ellen Goodspeed and Manuel Laguna are the leading vessels, both doing fairly. Philadelphia freights are quiet. The Hagerstown is now loading. Boston has no ship loading. Portland freight is slow. The R. B. Meade is the only vessel in berth. Rates are unchanged, with strong prospects of a sharp advance next month.

Overland freights remain unchanged, the only new feature being the projected meeting of the directors of separate roads on or about September 8 to consider the forming of a new pool, wherein the Northern Pacific will probably be admitted.

The above is from a very reliable farmer whose daughter was in poor health for seven or eight years and could obtain no relief until she used Hop Bitters. She is now in as good health as any person in the country. We have a large sale, and they are making remarkable cures. W. H. BISHOP & CO.

Voices and Physique.

The recent saengerfest at Buffalo showed that size is not an indication of the quality of the voice. A member of one of the Chicago societies, with a bass voice, very profundo, like the echo of distant thunder, is only five feet tall and weighing under 100 pounds, while the tenor eagero of a Cincinnati society, with a voice almost falsetto, tips the beam at 265 pounds.

BABY'S APPEAL.

"What makes I cry and 'oks say I'se naughty?"
Cause stomach ache, an' sour is my mouffy;
Cause too, can't sleep, and worms bites se belly;
"Fever," an' say, feel like I was jelly.
Guess your babies cry, Dick and Victoria,
When mam ma's gone and don't have Castoria.
"You're right!" they fairly yell. There, Uncle Cy;
Cousin Frank have Castoria; he don't cry.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

Western Oregon.

A correspondent writing from Silverton, Marion county, under date of August 26, says: Harvest is progressing finely, most of the crop being threshed; yield better than expected. On the poor dry hills and hard gravelly lowlands but little. Considerable of the poor yield is attributed to the mixed seed, bought for spring wheat but found to be half fall. The first piece of wheat threshed 20 bushels; oats, 33½ bushels; second wheat, 30 bushels; third wheat, 36 bushels, and in the Howell prairie generally good.

A solicitor for the News passed through our burg last week, but did not meet with a heavy success. To my remark that the News is a free whisky organ, he took a decided negative.

Southern Oregon.

Democratic Times: Reports from the harvest field denote that crops have often turned out better than anticipated a few weeks previously. Taken all round, there is about two-thirds of a yield, which speaks volumes in praise of the productiveness of this section. Had there been some rain during June, Jackson county's harvest would have been an immense one.

The annual reunion of the Southern Oregon Pioneer Society will be held at the grove in Ashland on Thursday, September 13, with appropriate exercises.

Washington Territory.

Chehalis Valley Vidette: T. W. Laws of Cedarville, writes us that the government employes are pushing the work on the big drift in the Chehalis river rapidly; also that they are building a scow twenty-six feet long and ten feet wide which they will use in their work on their way down the river.

Klickitat Sentinel: The dwelling house of Mrs. St. Lawrence, a blind woman, on the swale, was consumed by fire last Thursday. As there was no one there but Mrs St. Lawrence and her little children, everything was destroyed. A subscription is being raised for the benefit of the unfortunate family.

Post Intelligencer: D. A. Jennings has made an amicable settlement with his creditors, and the great iron doors were again thrown open yesterday. The settlement was effected on the basis of 85 cents on the dollar to Seattle creditors, and 80 cents on the dollar to San Francisco creditors. Messrs. D. T. Wheeler and J. H. Mitchell have been appointed trustees to receive and distribute the funds.

Olympia Transcript: On Wednesday Messrs. Geo. B. Bayley of San Francisco, Wm. C. Ewing of Ohio, and James Longmire and P. B. Van Trump of this county, returned from a trip to Mt. Rainier. The party were six days in reaching the top of the mountain, and remained one night on the summit. Relics of Van Trump and Stevens' visit, several years ago, were found, although the appearance of the mountain had considerably changed. They slept at the same place in the crater occupied by the previous party, but suffered greatly by the heat of the crater and the cold atmosphere outside. They passed over two distinct craters, one joining the other, from which clouds of steam were continually ascending, though they saw no fire, even at night. This trip seems to have been attended with great danger and hardship, and none of the party seem to have any desire to make another ascension.

Idaho.

Mrs. Hobart, a sister of Lott Wiggin, was thrown from a wagon on Saturday, in going up the grade towards White's, and had her wrist broken. She was brought back to Lapwai and received surgical aid. Mrs. Wiggin was also somewhat injured.

Says the Nez Perce News: "A private letter from Frank Points, of Palouse city, informs us that there is some excitement there in regard to placer mines discovered on the St. Joe. A man who was out there says a person panned out $40 in a day and that the gravel was taken from under the water of a lake. The man, Geo. McGreen, and four others have gone back. Frank Points will go out next week and on his return give us positive information in regard to the diggings."

Don't Die in the House. "Rough on Rats" clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bedbugs. 15c.

"TIME CONQUERED"

BY

"REX MAGNUS"

The Humiston Food Preservative.

IT PRESERVES MEATS, FISH, OYSTERS, MILK, Cream, Eggs and other food products in all their freshness, purity and sweetness, in all seasons and climates.

A Trial Will Prove It.

This preparation is NOT TO BE CLASSED WITH THOSE FAILURES WHICH HAVE PRECEDED IT. Scientific men like Prof. Samuel W. Johnson, of Yale College, and others, have tested it thoroughly and give it their most hearty endorsement. At a slight expense you can satisfy yourself by actual trial that IT WILL DO ALL THAT IS CLAIMED FOR IT.

How to Get It.

You do not have to buy a county right, nor a costly recipe; WE SELL NEITHER THE ONE NOR THE OTHER. All druggists and grocers keep it, or we will send you a sample pound prepaid (by mail or express, as we prefer) on receipt of price. Name your express office.

It is Safe, Pure, Tasteless, Harmless.

REX MAGNUS is composed of simple and harmless antiseptics, and the directions for its use are so plain that a child can follow them. It does not in the slightest degree affect the taste or appearance of the food, and it contains no injurious substances.

Within the Reach of All.

But a small quantity of the preservative is required for each article of food. Meats, fish, butter, etc., can be saved at a cost not exceeding a cent a pound.

"Viandine," for meats, poultry, etc., 50 cts. per lb.; "Ocean Wave," for oysters, lobsters, etc., 50c. "Pearl," for cream, $1. "Snow Flake," for milk, butter, etc., 50c. "Queen," for eggs, $1. "Aqua-Vitae," for fluid extracts, etc., $1. "Anti-Ferment," "Anti-Fly" and "Anti-Mold," 50 cents per lb. each. Put up in 1-lb. and 5-lb. cans and in 25-lb boxes. Mention this paper.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

SCROFULA

Has been more destructive to human health and life than war, pestilence and famine combined." So said a distinguished writer many years ago, and it is as true to-day as then. The poor victim of Blood Disease is drugged with Mercury to cure the malady, and then dosed with Iodide to cure him of the Mercurial Poisoning; but instead of any relief, the firm breaks down his general health and makes him a cripple, and the other ruins his digestive organs. To those afflicted in this way Swift's Specific is the greatest boon on earth, and is worth more than its weight in gold. It antidotes the Mercurial Poison, tones up the system, and brings the sufferer back to health and happiness. Every person who has ever been saturated about by a fraud has taken a thorough course of this remedy.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Twiggs Co., Georgia.

Five years ago I found on my plantation a colored man who was badly diseased. He stated that five years before he had contracted a violent case of Blood Poison, and had been treated by many physicians, all failing to cure him. I treated him with Swift's Specific and in a short time he was sound and well, and has not had a symptom of the disease since.

D. M. HUGHES.

One gentleman who had been confined to his bed six weeks with Mercurial Rheumatism has been cured entirely and speaks in the highest praise of S. S. S. CHILES & HARDY, Chattanooga, Tenn.

VITAL QUESTIONS.

Ask the most eminent physician

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, childlike, refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you, unhesitatingly "Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians: "What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically, "Buchu."

Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver diseases or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, &c.?" and they will tell you

"Mandrake! or Dandelion!"

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable

DR. CHEEVER'S ELECTRIC BELT, or Regenerator, is made especially for the cure of derangements of the generative organs. Whenever any debility of the generative organs occurs, from whatever cause, the continuous stream of ELECTRICITY permeating through the parts must restore them to healthy action. There is no mistake about this instrument. Years of use have tested it, and thousands of cures are testified to. Weakness from indiscretion, Lack of Vigor, Sterility—in fact, any troubles of these organs is cured. Do not confound this with electric belts advertised to cure all ills from head to toe. This is for the ONE specific purpose. For circulars giving full information, address CHEEVER ELECTRIC BELT CO., 103 Washington St., Chicago, Ill.

WEAK AND UNDEVELOPED

PARTS OF THE HUMAN BODY ENLARGED, DEVELOPED AND STRENGTHENED, etc., is an interesting advertisement long run in our paper. In reply to inquiries we will say that there is no evidence of humbug about this. On the contrary, the advertisers are very highly indorsed. Interested persons may get sealed circulars giving all particulars by addressing ERIE MEDICAL CO., P. O. Box 513, Buffalo, N. Y.—Toledo Evening Bee.
